Committee May Cut Pay Deductions From Tax Bill

Senators Reported Prepared to Drop Plan; Clark Holds Prepayment Unwise

By Samuel W. Bell
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Definite indication was given yesterday that the Senate Finance Committee is preparing to reject the drastic withholding tax provision in the House-approved revenue bill designed to collect a part of the taxes on 1943 income currently with taxes due on 1942 income, collectible beginning March 15 next.

The tax, as worked out by the House Ways and Means Committee as a compromise on various Treasury withholding tax proposals, was vigorously criticized throughout the Senate Committee hearings on the tax bill. As the result a subcommittee composed of Senators Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, Gerry (Democrat) of Rhode Island and Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut was appointed to study the proposal and make recommendations to the full committee on August 24.

Action Due on Service Bills

Chairman Clark said yesterday that while he had a "completely open mind" on the idea of collecting income taxes at the source, he could not agree with the principle of putting taxpayers on a current basis and at the same time forcing them to pay three years' income taxes in two years, as the House bill provides.

With Congress still in "informal" recess, legislative action this week probably will be confined to Senate action on two service bills, both approved by the House.

A measure designed to facilitate absentee voting by men in the armed forces in the November elections has been reported by the Senate Elections Committee. Chairman Green (Democrat) of Rhode Island said he would ask unanimous consent for consideration of the measure today. The committee, in its report Saturday, removed the major objection the measure—a proposal of Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida to exempt servicemen from poll taxes.

Prefers Pay-as-You-Go Plan

The second bill of importance to servicemen is the Rankin bill amending the Allowances and Allotments Act to permit payment of dependency allowances immediately. Under the act payments could not be made by the War Department until after November. A compromise suggesting an October 1 payment has been advanced. This bill will be called up by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, but the lack of a quorum may interfere with its immediate consideration.

Interest yesterday centered on the forthcoming tax decisions.

Beginning January 1, 1943, the withholding tax rate on 1943 incomes

California Gets Traffic Lights Fliers Can't See

San Francisco, Aug. 16 (AP).—A traffic light which cannot be seen by enemy airmen unless they descend to within 300 feet of the ground has been ordered installed on California highways to control the traffic both in and out of blackouts.

The State highway division which developed the device, said the new light would furnish enough illumination to handle ordinary high-speed traffic.

Flying in a blimp toward one of these lights, Commander Donald Mackey of the Naval Air Station at Moffett Field, reported he focused powerful binoculars in the direction of the device but could see no light even when the craft descended to 300 feet and was but a quarter to half a mile away.

To the motorist, the lights from a distance look like the ordinary red, green and orange disks.

Tax Program Should Provide 'Pay-as-You-Go' Basis, Economist Says

Wars are fought with men and materials. They are not fought with money. If they were, we should now be winning smashing victories.

To be sure, materials are purchased with money, and munitions workers and the armed forces are paid with money. No one denies that money is a convenient device for facilitating industrial and even military purposes. Still, the fact remains that the men who lose their lives or employ their time in the war effort and the natural resources which are devoted to defending our way of living, rather than to enhancing our material welfare, constitute the cost of the war.

Hence, this cost cannot in reality be deferred. All that is possible is to devise some elaborate bookkeeping devices which result in bequeathing the country an unwieldly, possibly unbearable, debt as well as diversion of our productive power from welfare to war purposes. Expenditures at the rate of those incurred in the second quarter of 1942 will create national debt, both public and private, equivalent to total national wealth by the middle of 1945, provided the present ratio of debt increase to total expenditures continues.

Therefore, the basic purpose of an acceptable tax program is to pay for the war as we go. It is recognized that tax programs to meet expanding needs should be carefully devised and thoroughly considered by Congress, although it is hardly plausible that a full year, or thereabouts, is required to vote a new tax measure. A much more convincing explanation is found in the coming elections. It may be remarked parenthetically that this procedure is quite unfair to each citizen and each business enterprise, since no one is able to make informed and systematic preparations for paying taxes which will be assessed on incomes for 1942.

We must recognize that a time lag between fiscal needs and the tax measures to meet those needs is unavoidable, and in this interval there is no practicable way of avoiding an increase in the Federal debt. Actual increase in the public debt cannot be explained, however, by the time lag which is necessary for voting revenue measures and putting them

Two Burned Fatally in D. C. And Md. Fires

Two Firemen Suffer Burns in Blazing Deanwood Cottage

Two persons were burned to death and another injured seriously in two fires early yesterday, one in the District and one in nearby Deanwood, Md. Two District firemen were painfully but not seriously burned while fighting the Deanwood blaze.

Also hurt were two workmen, who suffered shock and burns while repairing a transformer in a Potomac Electric Power Co. powerhouse.

James Hockaday, 35, was pronounced dead upon arrival at Emergency Hospital after being taken from the room he occupied at 815 C Street Southwest, the furnishings of which had caught fire in an undetermined manner. Death apparently was due to burns and suffocation by smoke, according to hospital attaches. Hockaday, a native of Raleigh, N. C., had lived here about 10 years. He was employed by an air conditioning firm.

Henry Johnson, 22, Negro, perished in a fire which destroyed the bungalow he occupied with his mother, Savannah Johnson, 56, at 5017 Nash Street, Deanwood. The mother was badly cut in escaping from the blazing house and was taken by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad to Gallinger Hospital, where her condition last night was said to be serious.

Two members of No. 27 Engine Company, which responded when a second alarm was given, received second-degree burns in fighting the flames. They were Pvts. R. F. Henry and J. E. Shaffer, who were given treatment by the Bladensburg Rescue quad and sent home.

Two Drowned Seeking Relief From Heat

Auditor and Soldier Are Victims; Crowds Jam Nearby Resorts

Two drownings occurred over the weekend as the heat and high humidity sent thousands of Washingtonians to swimming resorts for relief. The temperature climbed yesterday from 76 at 7:10 a. m. to 87 at 3:10 p. m., and the humidity—93 at 8 a. m.—remained unbearably high all day.

Local resorts had near capacity crowds, complicated by heavy traffic snarls that taxed parking facilities in spite of gas rationing.

Two boys, Robert G. Allen, 12, of 253 Fifteenth Street Southeast, and James Hasson, 14, 344 Fourteenth Street Southeast, told police of No. 5 Precinct a tragic story of how a swift current in the Anacostia River thwarted their attempts to rescue a man identified as Harry Boyd Coakley, 46, of 1306 Massachusetts Avenue Southeast, an auditor with the Public Building Administration.

Coakley, according to police, had been accustomed to swimming in that area, which was swollen because of recent rains. Between 8:30 and 9:30 Saturday night, the boys, while swimming nearby, heard a cry for help but could not reach Coakley because of the swift uptide.

The body was recovered at 6:45 yesterday morning.

The body of a soldier, tentatively identified as that of Wilfred Gaulthier, stationed on the A. P. Hill Military Reservation in Virginia, was taken from the waters at Colonial Beach at about 6:30 Saturday night.

Today's weather will be slightly cooler with scattered showers, according to the weather bureau.

Army Transport Plane Crash Carries 17 to Flaming Death

By the Associated Press

Peru, Mass., Aug. 16.—A large Army transport plane carried 17 men to flaming death last night when it crashed on isolated 2200-foot Garnet Peak on Peru Mountain, located in one of the most inaccessible spots in the Berkshires.

(An Army bombing plane crashed and burned in a cotton field 10 miles north of Loraine, Tex., today and Army authorities removed three bodies from the wreckage. The dead were not immediately identified).

Three severely burned men survived the Peru Mountain crash, which was one of the worst tragedies in the history of United States military aviation.

Shearing off the tops of trees for a distance of about 100 yards before it crashed onto a level area atop the peak, the plane immediately burst into flames, the public relations officer at Westover Field said.

Sergt. Robert Lee of Columbus, Ohio, his own clothes completely burned from his body, made two trips from the flaming wreckage, dragging four fellow passengers to what he thought was safety.

First, he carried out Pvt. James Fern of Abingdon, Va., and Pvt. Alonzo Pearson of Windber, Pa., who were given a good chance for recovery at Mercy Hospital, Pittsfield. Then he carried out two others, only to find that they already were dead.

Signaling for help by firing three shots from his revolver, Sergeant Lee walked dazedly three-quarters of a mile through dense underbrush to the nearest roadway, and directed State police back to the scene of the

Blimp Drifts In From Sea Minus Crew

Heavily Damaged Naval Craft Lands In Suburb of San Francisco

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—A Navy patrol blimp, buckled into a V shape, landed crewless in a street in suburban Daly City today and collapsed. Naval authorities at once began a search for the two officers known to have been aboard.

One of the blimp's depth charges, which was missing from the crumpled craft, was found later five miles from Daly City, on the Olympic Club's Lakeside golf course. The bomb was unexploded. It evidently had been scraped off when the blimp touched the ground in its flight.

Gasoline Supply Gone

The right propeller was bent and the right motor had bits of earth on it. There was no loose dirt around the spot where the blimp landed.

The craft, one of an undisclosed number on antisubmarine patrol along the Pacific Coast, descended slowly onto the Daly City street.

Residents, who saw it drift in from the ocean to the southwest, said one of the blimp's two bomb racks was intact. The craft's gasoline supply was gone, they said.

Parachutes of the blimp were in place, indicating that the two officers might have leaped from the craft into the Pacific. They presumably had life jackets.

Army, Navy, Coast Guard and State highway patrol forces participated in the search for the missing blimp men.

The names of the officers were not disclosed.

Wires Ease Landing

John Scotto, of Daly City, one of the first to sight the distressed craft, said it drifted in from the ocean on a strong wind. As it came close enough to perceive detail, he noted that it had buckled. It was settling gradually.

Just above the street level it dragged across several telephone and electric light wires. This eased its drop to the pavement.

A Navy crew assisted by soldiers and police threw a guard around the wreckage and quickly removed the remaining bomb and other important equipment.

Warn Nazis to Stop Killing Hostages, Dutch Leaders Ask

By the United Press

London, Aug. 16.—The Netherlands government has urged President Roosevelt to send Germany a "last warning" to halt the wave of "barbaric and inhuman crimes" in Holland, it was learned tonight as the Nazis were reported to have rounded up 220 more prominent Dutch as hostages for possible execution.

The Germans began their first executions of the war in Holland yesterday by killing five persons, including a count and a former aide to Queen Wilhelmina, in reprisal for the wrecking of a troop train more than a week ago, and have threatened to kill more of the 1815 hostages they now hold if the saboteurs are not caught.

Ask Public Warning

The appeal to the President, it was learned, said:

"Recent developments (in Holland) make it clearer than ever that the time has come to warn publicly those responsible for the barbaric and inhuman crimes committed daily."

It was said to have asked the President to warn Germany that those responsible for reprisal executions will be made to pay for their crimes after the war.

Memorial services for the five persons executed were held in London today. H. Van Boeyen, Netherlands interior minister, said in a memorial program on Radio Orange, the Dutch station here, that "the martyrs did not die in vain." Hundreds of Hollanders attended a crowded church service at the Netherlands church here.

Prominent Men Held

Private advices received here said that among the 220 new hostages were J. A. Van Thiel, attorney general of Amsterdam, and burgomasters of three towns in the Amsterdam area—J. Boddens Hosang of Naarden, J. P. W. Van Doorn of Heemstede and S. T. M. Middelholl

Big Area of Solomons Taken, Jap Convoy Severely Mauled; Reds 'Scorch' Maikop Oilfields

Russians Admit Loss Of Caucasus Center, But Say Enemy Will Get No Fuel There

By Henry C. Cassidy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Monday), Aug. 17.—Russia announced officially today that the Caucasus oil city of Maikop had fallen to the Germans, but only after all oil supplies and equipment had been saved from the city and the oil establishments themselves "made completely unusable."

The report of the loss of another Russian city to the Germans was issued as German infantrymen, tanks and planes pressed in full force against the massed Russian artillery defending the approaches to Stalingrad, on the Volga.

Oil Destruction Thorough

The midnight communique of the Soviet bureau of information indicated heavy fighting was continuing deeper in the Caucasus as well as on the two fronts threatening Stalingrad.

How well the Russians applied their famous scorched earth policy to their precious oil possessions at Maikop, which normally produced 7 per cent of Russia's oil, was told in this graphic announcement of the communique:

"Our troops have left the town of Maikop.

"Equipment of the Maikop oil industries and all supplies of oil were evacuated in time and the oil establishments themselves were made completely unusable.

Won't Get It

"The German Fascists who expected with the capture of Maikop to enrich themselves at the expense of Soviet oil have miscalculated.

"They did not get the Soviet oil and will not get it."

The German high command in rapid-fire special communiques of August 9 announced the capture of the Caucasus cities of Maikop and Krasnodar. The Soviets today reported fighting still was continuing in the Krasnodar area, despite the

So Malta Might Hold

Witness Tells How Big Convoy Fought Off Hundreds of Planes

(Editor's Note: The following first detailed account of the great convoy battle of the Mediterranean last week is written by a correspondent of the British Exchange Telegraph news agency who was on the British aircraft carrier Eagle, sunk early in the action. The convoy reached Malta after the acknowledged sinking of the Eagle and the cruiser Manchester.)

By Arthur A. Thorpe

Gibraltar, Aug. 16 (AP).—Today I heard details of the terrific air attacks launched against the convoy of merchant ships on its way to succor gallant Malta.

Hundreds of Axis planes were flung into the fight to prevent the much-needed supplies and reinforcements from reaching the island. But only a small proportion sent their bombs and torpedoes at the great armada owing to the magnificent work of the fleet air arm fighter planes.

High-level bombers, torpedo planes and Stukas came out in huge formations from air bases in Sardinia and Sicily, but a cordon of constantly circling fighters smashed up attack after attack and sent the bombers scurrying to their bases, their bombs exploding harmlessly in the sea many miles from the ships.

Merchant ships plodded resolutely along over the blue sunlit waters of the Mediterranean. Battleships, cruisers, aircraft carriers and many destroyers enclosed them in outer and inner rings of hundreds of long and short range antiaircraft guns, while the carriers' fighters roared around out of sight awaiting an enemy onslaught.

The Eagle was sunk when we were nearing the edge of the battle zone. Some of her fighters were in the air at the time and flew on to one of the other carriers.

The first air attack came five hours after the Eagle was sunk. An officer in a battleship which returned to Gibraltar told me that four Junkers 88s evaded fighters and dived on his ship. An intense barrage of shells pumped up at them spoiled their aim and their bombs exploded in the sea.

"We knew that large formations were all around us," the officer said, "but the carriers' fighters were wonderful in splitting up enemy formations and driving them off.

"Axis planes never managed to reach us in really strong numbers.

Moslem Chief Vows Revolt If Hindus Rule

Jinnah Tells British His People Must Not Be Sacrificed to Gandhi

By Preston Grover
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bombay, Aug. 16.—The leader of India's 80 million Moslems, Mohammed Ali Jinnah, declared today that if the British in seeking peace with the Hindu-dominated All-India Congress Party sacrificed the Moslems' interests he would end his "cooperation."

"We have gone far enough," said Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, which has remained aloof from Gandhi's passive resistance campaign for immediate Indian independence.

"If the British now seek peace with the congress, we would consider that a betrayal of the Moslems who have been holding out a helping hand to Britain," he added.

Says He'd Fight

Asked if he would tell the Moslems to "go to it" and resist any Hindu government the British might possibly set up, he declared:

"I would do it even if the British shot me down. I would do it even if it meant my death. All I would have to do would be to give the word to my 80 millon followers."

The Moslems, a minority in the Indian population, have contributed a strongly disproportionate percentage to the army of more than one million guarding against expected attack by the Japanese in next-door Burma.

Jinnah's remarks were made at a press conference in response to questions suggested by the possi-

Atlantic Ship Sinkings Drop To 7 for Week

Seven Allied merchantmen were destroyed by enemy undersea raiders in the western Atlantic, announcements last week disclosed, as the Axis submarine net in that area appeared to be slowly shifting southward and east and out of the United States East Coast and Caribbean warship-escorted convoy lanes.

A decline in submarine-sinkings seemed to be indicated with last week's announced losses the lowest of any one of the last 16 weeks.

Convoys in Atlantic coastal waters, set up late in May, and in the Caribbean, inaugurated July 1, have been escorted by planes, blimps, trawlers and PC boats. These are said to be playing the most decisive roles in turning aside the submarine menace along the two convoy routes.

The deaths of 56 seamen were reported last week, but 134 others were rescued and safely landed at United States, Caribbean and South American ports.

Sinkings since August 9 included two British vessels, two Dutch, two Cuban and one Norwegian, boosting to 426 the Associated Press tally of announced ship losses in western Atlantic waters since Pearl Harbor.

The tabulation:

Scholar Posing as Refugee Stands Trial as Spy Today

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Aug. 16.—Herbert Karl Friedrich Bahr, the jaunty scholar accused by the FBI of being a German spy who tried to slip into the United States as a refugee, will go on trial tomorrow in Federal Court.

Death in the electric chair is the maximum penalty that may be imposed on the 29-year-old former Buffalo (N. Y.) resident if he is convicted of conspiring to commit espionage.

An excellent scholar, Bahr went back to his native Germany as an exchange student. He returned to America aboard the refugee liner Drottningholm on which he was arrested July 9 as the diplomat exchange vessel was combed by Federal agents at its Jersey City pier.

The indictment charges Bahr conspired with eight men in Germany, Switzerland, Spain, Sweden, Turkey and Brazil to forward to Germany information pertaining to the American war effort.

Held without bail in Hudson County jail, Bahr's only appearance publicly was when he was taken handcuffed for arraignment July 22 before Federal Judge William F. Smith. He pleaded mnocent through court-assigned counsel, Frederic M. P. Pearse of Newark.

At the time of his arrest, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, said Bahr carried $7000 in United States currency for use in "loosening the tongues" of people in this country and for transportation and obtaining of military information.

Bahr took espionage instructions from the German Gestapo, Hoover said, came to America on an altered and mutilated passport and carried chemicals used in the manufacture of ink for invisible writing.

MacArthur's Fliers Score Heavy Blows On Enemy Vessels Sailing From Rabaul

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

At least 5000 square miles of jungle and mountain flanking the Australian supply lines were believed yesterday, on the basis of unofficial estimates, to have fallen into the hands of United States Marines fighting their way into the Japanese-held Solomon Islands.

Officially, silence shrouded the first American major offensive in this war, an offensive which yesterday ended its tenth day. It appeared, on the basis of unofficial reports from the battle area, that American Marines, assisted by Navy ships and Navy aircraft, had fixed their hold on all the small southeastern islands in the Solomon group.

General MacArthur's headquarters early today reported another attack at Timor.

Allied medium bombers kindled fires along the southeastern coast of the Japanese-held island 400 miles northwest of Darwin, yesterday, the communique announced. It said that skirmishing continued between small Allied and Japanese forces in the Kokoda area of New Guinea.

Japanese propaganda, which at first shrugged off the American offensive as of little consequence and destined to failure, has reversed its tenor. The Japanese radio yesterday admitted that "the battle is continuing between our forces and American Marines who succeeded in landing."

Aid Apparently Blocked

From Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Australia came reports of continued raids by bombing aircraft of the Army on Japanese bases and shipping north of the Solomons. These attacks from the air apparently have prevented the Japanese from sending reinforcements of men or material to their forces fighting for the positions threatening American communications with Australia.

These reports indicated that Marines had succeeded in seizing Tulagi Harbor on the south coast of Florida Island, the Guadalcanal Airdrome and, on several small islands are consolidating their positions, resisted only by scattered bands of Japanese.

Fighting on Timor Disclosed

While land operations appeared to be progressing favorably, the sea and air phases of the offensive were reported to be reaching a tempo in keeping with the importance the Solomons' assault has assumed. The Melbourne radio yesterday reported that Allied aircraft had "scored heavily" on a Japanese convoy mov-

Light Warships Battle in Channel For Two Hours

By the Associated Press

Folkestone, England, Aug. 16.—A battle believed to be between British and Axis light naval forces raged in the foggy Straits of Dover off here tonight more than two hours after the first shots were heard.

An hour before midnight the fog which had shrouded the Straits lifted and watchers saw the sea lit up by flares in the direction of Boulogne. There was no sound of airplanes and it was believed star shells had been fired.

German long range guns, which earlier sent shells screaming across the Channel, ceased fire well before midnight and smaller guns stopped firing soon afterward. Earlier observers had heard heavy and light gunfire for some time. Fast motor craft were heard maneuvering well out in the Channel.

R. A. F. Strikes Hard At Rommel's Ports

'Bearing Gifts'

Nazis Offer Greeks Food And Work

Istanbul, Aug. 15 (Delayed) (AP).—The Nazis are now operating a "starve or work" scheme in Greece, according to Greek newspapers reaching Istanbul.

After having submitted the Greeks to an intense food shortage for over a year the Germans are now promising abundant food and educational opportunities and good pay for Greek workmen who will sign up for labor in Germany, the papers say.

The Nazis also are recruiting Greek labor with similar inducements for work on German naval projects on Crete and for work in the vicinity of Athens, presumably on airports to be used by the Luftwaffe.

On August 8, "the sixth labor expedition to Germany," as it was called by the Greek press, left from Lariso. Five previous expeditions, the papers said, comprised over 8000 men and women volunteers.

You Can't Stop Kelley

Seattle, Aug. 16 (AP).—Capt. Delbert J. Kelley told today how American ingenuity and Irish luck combined to effect delivery of a cargo of aviation gasoline at a United States Army airfield on a South Seas island.

Arriving at the island, Captain Kelley found the only anchorage was 175 miles from the field and that there was no way to get the barreled gasoline to it.

So he flew over and around the island in a plane, finally spotting a narrow, uncharted channel winding over reefs and between islets to a beach where the cargo could be delivered. The captain worked the vessel to within about 600 feet of the beach near the airfield. Then he moored the ship firmly.

Realizing the time it would take to tow the drums ashore with small boats, Kelley commandeered a Diesel tug lying nearby out of commission. The ship's engine room crew repaired the tug's motor and moored the tug alongside with its stern pointing to the beach.

Boom sticks were made of dunnage, stanchions and other available material and stretched in a double line to the beach. With the tug's engine going, the gasoline drums were rolled overboard into the "corral" and the wash from the tug's propeller drove them to the beach where soldiers brought them ashore.

Hint of Mainz Damage

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 16 (AP).—The German railway authority, reports reaching here said today, has banned all but urgent travel to Mianz while the work of clearing away the wreckage of last week's R. A. F. bombing proceeds.

The Frankfurter Zeitung said it had been requested that "only indispensable journeys to Mainz be made in order to relieve the rolling stock and personnel."

The paper added that the death list now totaled 80. Political leaders and Hitler Youth have been working continuously since the night of August 11, the paper said, digging in ruins and putting out fires.

Voelkischer Beobachter listed as among the buildings destroyed the Mainz Cathedral, the bishop's palace and five other churches.

British Reveal How Malta's Air Fighters Covered Big Convoy

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Aug. 16.—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's North African supply ports were heavily pounded last night by the R. A. F., while in other operations over the Mediterranean an Axis ship was reported hit and some power lighters attacked.

The raids were announced shortly after R. A. F. spokesmen declared remarkable cooperation between air and sea forces last week had enabled a furiously-beset British convoy to deliver vital supplies to Malta.

The operations against the ports began at dusk last night. Light bombers visited Matruh, while heavies and mediums attacked Tobruk scoring hits on shipping and starting fires among the gasoline stores. Salum was attacked on the return journey.

The ship reported hit in the Mediterranean was bombed by a plane which sighted on the target by closely watching flashes from anti-aircraft guns. A mushroom-like fire shot up into the sky a moment after the downward swish of the British bombs.

Aussies Get 2 Lighters

The attack on the lighters was made by an Australian light bomber squadron which has been harassing lighters creeping along the coast. The Aussies now claim 17 sunk in recent attacks, with two more presumed to be lost in today's raid.

R. A. F. spokesmen, talking of the attack on the convoy, said that as the ships entered "bomb alley"—the narrow passage between Sicily and Tunisia—British fighters took off from island bases in continuing patrols over the supply-laded merchant ships from down to dusk.

After Thursday, when the main body of ships reached port, British fighters shot down seven enemy planes which were making frantic efforts to destroy the supplies. The R. A. F. spokesmen said the fighters' success could be measured also by the number of bombs which intercepted enemy planes were obliged to jettison harmlessly into the sea.

Six more enemy bombers were shot down into the sea later, bringing the score to 13.

The R. A. F. said Spitfires had won local air superiority over Malta during the last few weeks and enabled the convoy to make the last stage comparatively free of damage.

Day Is Raid-Free

(A dispatch from Valletta, Malta, today said that most heavily bombed spot in the world, went through today and last night without an air raid—the first consecutive day and night of calm since February 19.)

The convoy was accompanied by a formidable show of British warships—including battleships, carriers, cruisers and destroyers. The British have admitted only the loss of the carrier Eagle and the cruiser Manchester, despite Axis claims of sinking or damaging upwards of 20 ships.

Supplying Malta, a painful thorn on the flank of the Axis supply route to Egypt, was a vital maneuver in the battle for Egypt.

The land forces of Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck and Marshal Erwin Rommel remained quiet except for patrol activities, a headquarters communique said. R. A. F. planes attacked targets in the battle area 75 miles west of Alexandria and sank three lighters bringing supplies to Rommel.

THE FLEET GROWS—The submarine Snook slides down the ways of the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard, the eighth launching there this year. Sponsor was Mrs. James C. Dempsey of Germantown, Pa., wife of the submarine commander decorated for sinking a Jap sub in the Pacific

By the Associated Press

South Portland, Me., Aug. 16.—In a mighty effort to strengthen the United Nations' sea power, Maine shipbuilders sent two speedy destroyers and six big merchant vessels into the water in a mass launching that required less than four hours.

Ranking Army, Navy and Government figures joined the workmen, their families and guests in colorful ceremonies at which Admiral Emory S. Land, United States Maritime Commission chairman, told the shipbuilders the "commission is convinced there is almost no limit to your productivity."

The program was broadcast on a national radio hookup and by short wave to Europe.

Two Built in 48 Days

In the greatest single launching event of the Second World War, the Todd-Bath Iron Shipbuilding Corporation opened ponderous steel gates to permit fussing tugboats to haul five 10,000-ton cargo carrier, built for Great Britain, into Portland Harbor.

Two of the 5, the Ocean Seaman and Ocean Gallant, required only 48 days from keel laying to launching, 9 days faster than the yard's best previous time. The other 3, the Ocean Stranger, Ocean Wayfarer and Ocean Traveller, were in the basins 61 days.

The sixth freighter, the Liberty ship Ethan Allen, 10,500 tons, skidded down the ways of the Maritime Commission's adjacent South Portland Shipbuilding Corp. yard, which, like the Todd-Bath plant, was swampland less than two years ago.

The Ethan Allen required 200 days' work.

Land Speaks at Both Yards

The trim destroyers slid into the Kennebec River from the yard of the Bath Iron Works Corp., which also built warships to help win World War I.

Speaking at both yards here before most of the dignitaries went to Bath to see the destroyers enter the water, Admiral Land declared: "We must make time work for us and allow none of that time to be wasted." He added:

"Every time you hit a rivet, think of it as Hitler and hit it again. Hit it harder!

"Every time you weld a seam, think of it as a Jap and turn on the heat—plenty of heat!

"Every day as you finish your job, think to yourselves, 'That's a good lick put in for Uncle Sam.'"

Minesweeper, Cargo Ship Launched in Texas

Beaumont, Tex., Aug. 16 (AP).—Two vessels, a minesweeper and a cargo ship, were launched at Pennsylvania Shipyards today.

U. S. S. Portent, the minesweeper, was christened by Mrs. Arthur L. Kline, jr., of Beaumont, sister-in-law of a missing Buffalo, N. Y., sailor, Robert E. Kline.

The cargo vessel, Cape St. Elias, was sponsored by Miss Frankie Ramery of Beaumont, sister of a shipyard worker. Both vessels slipped into the water on bananas, a local launching custom.

Batista Fires Premier, Names Unity Cabinet

By the Associated Press

Havana, Cuba, Aug. 16.—In the first replacement leading toward a national unity cabinet, President Fulgencio Batista today sacrificed his old personal friend, Prime Minister Carlos Saladrigas, and named as Prime Minister a former political adversary, Senator Ramon Zaydin.

Other new ministers were:

Jose Agustin Martinez, nonpartisan, secretary of foreign relations; Representative Sergio Valdes, democrat, secretary of agriculture; Evelio Govantes, liberal, public works; Senator Juan Miguel Portuondo Domenech, liberal, public health; and Representative Rafael Santos Jiminez, democrat, minister without portfolio.

President Batista did not include any Communist Party members in the cabinet, although the Communists are part of the coalition. By omitting the Communists he avoided difficulties threatened by some other coalition party members. The Communists, however, agreed to cooperate with the new government.

Zaydin, Cuba's second Prime Minister, is a member of the Liberal Party, one of the coalition now supporting Batista. A former newspaper editor, he participated in revolutionary meetings in New York preceding the ouster of President Gerardo Machado in 1933. He supported President Miguel Mariano Gomez when Congress, with Batista's approval, ousted Gomez as President in 1936.

Saladrigas was the target of opposition leaders as the most important man in the Batista government, which they charged with mismanaging the war effort, failure to control speculation in foodstuffs and widespread abuse of patronage.

Mentioned for President

Saladrigas has been prominently mentioned as a possible candidate to succeed Batista as President in 1944. Some members of his own Democratic Party and of other pro-administration coalition groups have started gunning for him because of these aspirations.

Although Batista gave up Saladrigas, politicians said he emerged otherwise victorious in the cabinet maneuvers because various coalition parties had renounced claims for any cabinet posts and pledged cooperation.

Batista himself initiated the cabinet reorganization with a manifesto July 23 calling for cessation of all partisan activities and a streamlined government for the war effort. The cabinet of Prime Minister Saladrigas resigned August 4.

Saladrigas became Cuba's first Prime Minister October 10, 1940, when Batista was inaugurated.

Registration Started

Meanwhile, the registration of men between 18 and 25 for military service is under way.

It was announced that a bill has been introduced in the Senate removing the exemptions for Senators and Representatives and all other officials from compulsory military service. It also would provide that Cuban forces would not be allowed to leave the national territory without congressional authority and that foreigners may be called to serve if necessary. The administration was said to be supporting the proposals. Dih hh-- n .. ...

Mrs. Baker Seeks Nurse Reserves

MRS. ISABELLE BAKER

Mrs. Isabelle Wilbur Baker, formerly director of the home hygiene service at Red Cross national headquarters, has been appointed recruiting secretary for the District Red Cross Nursing Service, Miss Lillian E. Bischoff, chairman of the service, announced yesterday.

The new recruiting secretary will be in charge of enrolling nurses in the Red Cross First Reserve, which supplies nurses for the Army and Navy.

The need for military nurses can be helped by bringing back into public service retired nurses who could release young, competent nurses for the war services, Mrs. Baker said.

Unmarried women between the ages of 21 and 40 years who are graduate nurses are eligible for the Red Cross First Reserve and those accepted by the Army or Navy are commissioned as officers with a base pay of $90 a month, plus maintenance, it was pointed out.

Applicants should apply for an interview with Mrs. Baker at her headquarters, 1730 E Street Northwest.

Stressing the need for every nurse to get back on the job, Mrs. Baker declared:

"In days gone by enrollment in the Red Cross Nursing Service was an optional professional gesture, but now it is a patriotic obligation, morally compulsory, although still on a volunteer basis."

U. S. Fighter Planes Make Daylight Sweep Over France

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 16.—United States Army fighters, flying wing to wing with a Canadian squadron, made a long sweep over France in the past 24 hours, a communique announced today.

With the R. A. F. they also participated in convoy patrols and in interception sorties.

The United States communique, the fourth to be issued from the European theater of operations, offered no details but British sources described the operations as routine.

The R. A. F. pilots, who after nearly three years of war know the air over France as well as over their own airdromes and who are wise to the tricks of the Luftwaffe, apparently kept close to the Americans. The sweep thus was something in the nature of an educational flight in preparation for the day when all-American units will strike independent blows at the Axis.

Last night British bombers renewed their attacks on western Germany. The force was of moderate size. Five bombers were missing after the raids during which one German fighter was shot down.

A Berlin broadcast said four bombers were shot down and casualties had been suffered by civilians.

The night attacks, the German high command said, followed "insignificant daylight nuisance raids" in western Germany and flights over occupied territory. It said the British lost eight planes, and did not mention the Americans at all.

The air ministry news service said thick cloud layers hampered the R. A. F. pilots in last night's raid but some of the crews found gaps through which they could see familiar landmarks and aim accurately for the targets.

One Wellington bomber had two brushes with German planes. It drove off the first with gunfire from the rear turret and shot down a second, a Junkers 88, after the fighter had wounded the bomber's wireless operator with cannon and machine gun fire.

Spitfires today continued their attacks on railway communications in occupied France, the air ministry news service said. Flying at tree-top height along the railway from Rue to Etaples, they damaged a freight train, while other Spitfires attacked vessels moored in the canal near Ouistreham.

Belgian pilots participated in these operations, from which one plane was missing.

ing to an unknown destination from Rabual in New Britain. Five Zero fighters were said to have been shot down during the air battle and at least six others severely damaged.

This air attack was declared to have been part of a "systematic offensive" against Japanese shipping along a 1000-mile sealane between New Guinea and Timor. Air units were also reported to be active in supplying the Marines fighting on land, while vessels of the Navy kept open a vital supply line to New Zealand and swept Sealark and Indispensable channels clear of Japanese surface craft.

Already harassed by the threatened loss of their valuable Solomons bases, the Japanese were disclosed yesterday to have had fresh troubles thrust upon them by the offensive spirt which is growing in the Southwest Pacific.

It was revealed that organized Allied resistance is still in progress on Timor, which the Japs have held for a long time. And the Japanese attack toward Port Moresby has been so far from successful that the enemy has been compelled to reinforce his troops in the interior of New Guinea to avert disaster in the fighting near Kokoda.

In the hands of the Japanese, the Solomon Islands constitute an always imminent threat to the long seaborne line of communications between the United States and Australia, along whose flank they lie. Reports that the Japanese were building an important air base in the Solomons were current before the American offensive was launched.

In American hands, the islands will not only cease to be a threat to Allied communications but will become a pivotal point for Allied operations against New Guinea. So great is the importance of these islands that it is possible the Japanese may be inspired to send sufficient reinforcements to develop the Solomons battle into an engagement of decisive proportions.

Crucial for Australia

Its importance to Australians was revealed in a speech yesterday at Sydney by William M. Hughes, Australian premier in the first World War. The fight, he declared, was "as much a battle for Australia as if it were being fought on our own coastline."

"The battle," Hughes said, "is of an entirely different category from the Midway and Coral Sea battles as it marks the turning of the Allies for the first time to the offensive.

"There have been losses, but gains cannot be made without losses. It has been shown that, man for man, the Japanese are not equal to the United States Marines.

"If the American offensive is successful, it will relieve the pressure on Australia."

Sen. Tydings Expects 'Considerable Success'

Baltimore, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Senator Willard E. Tydings declared tonight there is reason to believe from "all reports" that the American thrust at the Japanese in the Solomon Islands "promises considerable success."

Although warning against immature claims to final victory, Tydings said that the "attack which our forces launched with good surprise have been pressed with success, giving us the upper hand." This assault, he added, has begun the "difficult job of driving the Japanese out of the Pacific Islands and back toward Japan."

"This is a happening of the very first importance," he said in a radio address. "There is no doubt about it that large airplane fields will soon be built in these islands and vast numbers of our planes based there. From these bases we will then be in a position to strike hard blows at the Japanese air fields in eastern New Guinea. This will go far toward strengthening the defenses of Australia."

Noting that it has been from New Guinea bases that Japan has bombed Port Moresby and northeastern Australia, he said that American occupation of the Solomons "will permit us to launch pincers movements directed toward driving the enemy first from New Guinea and finally from all the East Indies as an ultimate objective."

Japs Launch Counterattack At Linchwan

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Aug. 16.—The Japanese have launched a counterattack at Linchwan and Huwan, 12 miles to the southeast, after receiving 3000 reinforcements, and bitter fighting is raging in that part of Kiangsi Province, the Chinese high command said today.

Since early July when the Japanese attempted a westward invasion of Hunan Province from Linchwan and were bloodily repulsed along the Kan River, the Chinese have been strongly attacking Linchwan and a few days ago reported their troops in the outskirts of the town. At one time the Chinese recaptured Huwan but were forced to withdraw.

The Japanese also were said to be counterattacking in the hilly region northwest of Linchwan.

Chinese said they had seized a large quantity of supplies in continued attacks on a defeated Japanese force southeast of Tsingtien in Chekiang Province.

Tsingtien is about 25 miles northwest of the Port of Wenchow and about the same distance southeast of Lishui (Chuchow), an air base.

Suit to Test Power of WLB Asked by Firm

Boston, Aug. 16 (U.P.).—A test case to have the courts determine the powers of the National War Labor Board to issue directive orders concerning union maintenance and compulsory arbitration was asked today by the S. A. Woods Machine Co. of South Boston, war production concern which the Government has threatened to take over.

The company wired Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB a proposal that the board bring suit against the company in Federal Court here to enforce inclusion of a maintenance of membership clause in a contract to be signed between the company and a C. I. O. union. The board's employers' group has told the company that it would urge "prompt action" if it failed to obey the order.

The company promised to accept service and to cooperate in carrying the test case to the United States Supreme Court.

Roosevelt Gets Alcoa Pay Plea

Cleveland, Aug. 16 (AP).—A Cleveland local of the C. I. O. Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union today appealed to President Roosevelt to set aside the War Labor Board decision turning down request of aluminum workers for a $1-a-day wage increase.

"This unfair decision, in the face of clear-cut evidence justifying the demands and in the face of pay increase decisions in steel, auto and other industries, has created a critical war production danger here," George Radnor, president of Local 755, said he told the President in a telegram.

The local represents workers in five Cleveland plants of Aluminum Co. of America.

Lend-Lease Serves Vital Areas First

Disclosing that all lend-lease commitments are being rechecked in order to divert exports to the most vital areas, Administrator Edward R. Stettinius, jr., reported last night upon the results of his trip to England, from where he returned last week.

"Whenever the occasion has arisen," he asserted, "lend-lease has halted export of materials already delivered to representatives of lend-lease countries here, in order to fill an unexpected need in th United States."

Similarly, he indicated, goods had been diverted to fronts where they could be immediately used, or where the nedd was greater than in the immediate destination—the diversions made to fit in which the joint strategy of the United States and Great Britain.

"Lend-lease is now rechecking the uses of all critical raw materials for delivery to the lend-lease nations to aid in the determination in each case as to whether the use of such materials is the most vital that could be made for the combined war effort.

Controls Are Flexible

"I wish to emphasize," he concluded, "that these controls are being applied in the present situation in accordance with production and strategy determinations made jointly by the United States and Great Britain. They are flexible enough to meet changing situations as they develop.

"Their purpose is to make sure that critical raw materials available to the United States are allocated where they will be most effectively used for the war, whether it be to United States production or to our Allies."

Stettinius said that England is "doing a fine job" in distributing to the greatest advantage, her share of American lend-lease food, supplies and equipment.

The onetime head of the United States Steel Co. returned after a trip which was planned primarily to harmonize the joint efforts of the two nations in the adjustment of requirements to developing shortages in critical materials.

"I was very favorably impressed," he asserted, "by the way they are using the lend-lease materials we have sent them and by the measures they are taking to keep their requirements to a minimum and to adjust them to the supply available to both countries.

"Like us, they face a very difficult situation in meeting their urgent needs, but they are doing a fine job."

U. S. Needs Considered First

Stettinius said the Lend-Lease Administration, at the same time, was using the controls that are in force over United States materials supplies to the United Nations in order to fill American needs.

Reviewing the elaborate care with which the United States is watching over the supplies which are pouring into Allied nations at the approximate rate of $175 a second, or eight billion dollars a year, the administrator explained that all requests were being considered in connection with United States military and essential civilian needs.

"All requests for critical raw materials," he pointed out, "are first screened by the Lend-Lease Administration. They are also screened on an over-all basis by the requirements committee of the War Production Board before any specific allocations of these materials are made.

"Specific allocations to lend-lease countries are made by the requirements committee after considering their requests along with the United States' military and essential civilian requirements.

"Recommendations for allocations of critical materials on a world basis among the United Nations—including British Empire materials to the United States as well as United States materials to Britain and elsewhere—are made by the combined raw materials board."

Stettinius emphasized that lend-lease has as its prime objective that raw materials as well as other war supplies, "should be supplied to those places where they can do the most to help win the war in the shortest time."

"It continuously reviews individual requests," he added, "in order to leave available as much as possible of the allocation for diversion to United States military or essential domestic use where this seems desirable for the combined war effort."

Intellectual Leaders Being Singled Out For Hostage Killings

By J. Wes Gallagher
Wide World Staff Writer

London.—A definite pattern of death has been written by Himmler's Gestapo firing squads in occupied Europe as the Nazis seek to break the will of the people they have overrun.

Poets and politicians, professors and doctors, churchmen and newspaper editors, army officers and pacifists have predominated in the long lists of hostage shootings and concentration camp deaths engineered by the Gestapo.

"But if you study the lists you find that the Germans are trying to kill all the leaders and intellectuals who have the following and ability to engineer any organized resistance," a Cezch government spokesman declared.

Spokesmen for governments in London agree that the hostage slayings and arrests are all designed to eliminate the "thinking element" in Europe as part of Hitler's grand plan to reduce all conquered nations to slave countries.

A hostage list of those shot or held reads like a European Who's Who. Here are a few supplied by governments now in London.

France (Shot as Hostages)

Count Henri Honore d'Estienne d'Orves, member of famous French family and naval officer; Gabriel Peri, Communist deputy in Chamber of Deputies; Fernand Holweck, Sorbonne professor and one of France's most famous scientists; Leon Jost, president of former Servicemen's Association; Boris Wilde, professor of science at the Museum of Anthropology.

Czechoslovakia (Shot)

General Alois Elias, former prime minister; Dr. Alois Klapka, mayor of Prague and famous lawyer, Zladislaz Zamcura, nationally known poet and author; Prof. B. Baxa of University of Prague; Dr. Vietor Felber, professor of economics, Prague University.

Netherlands (Shot as Hostages)

William Ruts, director, general of the Lloyd-Rotterdam Line; the Count of Limburg Stirum of Arnhem; a Mr. Waalde, a Rotterdam attorney; Christopher Bennekers, former police inspector of Rotterdam; Alexander Baron Schimmelpenninck Van Der Roye, former president of the Netherlands Olympic Committee.

Netherlands (Held as Hostages)

Jo Vincent, nationally known singer; Marinnus Van Der Goes Van Naters, socialist leader; Titus Brandsma, professor Nymeyens University; R. H. E. Gravemeyer, secretary general of Dutch Reformed Church; Dr. Hendrik Colyn, former Prime Minister.

Norway (Shot)

Viggo Hanstein, legal adviser to Norwegian trade union.

Hostages:

Didrik Seip, president Oslo University; William Dahl-Mansen, president of Norwegian Ship Owners Association; Harold Greig, director of National Theater; Professor Francis Bull, literature expert, Oslo University.

Poland (Shot)

Kazimierz Bartel, former Polish prime minister; Dr. Maciej Rataj, speaker of lower house of Parliament and Peasant Party Leader; Mieczslaw Niedzialkowski, leader Socialist Party; Professor Ronan Rybarski, Warsaw University; Janus Kusocimski, Olympic games runner who once refeated Nurmi.

[Yugoslavia (Held as Hostages at Last Reports].

Bragutin Protic, governor of National Bank of Yugoslavia; Milutin Dordvic, former minister of finance; Dr. Alexander Belic, chairman of University Society of Science; Dr. Bragutin Antic, professor Belgrade University and nationally known authority on medicine; Dr. Tinomir Dordezic, historian.

Greece (Held as Hostages at Last Reports):

L. Roufos, former minister of foreign affairs; A. Athonassakis, head of the Greek Red Cross; Alexander Zannas, former minister of aviation and Liberal Party leader; H. Fitsikis, dean Polytechnic School of Athens.

The Belgian government was the only one which said hostage shootings and arrests had not followed intellectual lines.

"Up until about a month ago many professors were under arrest but they were released suddenly," a spokesman said. "We don't know why they were released or why the same Gestapo lines have not been followed in Belgium as in other countries.

U-Boat Seizes Captain After Sinking Ship

By the Associated Press

An East Coast Port, Aug. 16.—Thirteen additional survivors of the Uraguayan 5285-ton freighter, Maldonado, torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine west of Bermuda August 1, today told how the submarine commander took the ship's captain, Mario Gianbeuo, aboard his vessel as a prisoner and left the rest of the crew to drift in lifeboats.

The survivors of the vessel, second Uraguayan ship to be sunk since the war began, were landed here yesterday after having been picked up by a naval vessel. The Navy said 13 other crewmen were landed at Bermuda on August 7.

The vessel's skipper was still aboard the submarine when it left the scene of the attack and there is no indication that he has been released.

First Officer's Story

First Officer Andres Cikoto told this story:

"We first sighted the submarine about 6:30 p. m. and for four hours she paralleled our course during which time we floodlighted our Uraguayan flag painted on our side. Then, about midnight, she fired a shot across our bow, then fired three shells at us and blinked the signal 'boats.'

"Our whole crew of 49 piled into four lifeboats and rowed away. The submarine fired one torpedo into her and then started to cruise about among our lifeboats.

"The submarine commander in the conning tower called for the captain and the chief engineer. The captain's boat rowed over to the submarine and the captain was taken aboard. As the chief engineer was about to step aboard the submarine got under way and submerged."

Second Torpedo Sinks Her

Cikoto added that the submarine then fired a second torpedo into the freighter, breaking it in half and sinking it immediately.

For a few days the lifeboats kept together, survivors explained, but after several nights they lost contact with each other. Only one boat, bearing the 13 survivors, was picked up off this coast port.

The men said they experienced no particular hardships during the two-week voyage except for the small water ration of six ounces a day. The boats were well provided with biscuits, chocolate and fresh fruit.

Hepburn Places Jap Naval Losses At 5 Times Ours

New Orleans, Aug. 16 (AP).—Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, recently-named chairman of the Navy's General Board, said here today that Japanese naval losses since the start of the war had been possibly five times as great as those of the United States, including Pearl Harbor.

"Their losses in tonnage have been several times ours, perhaps as great as five times as much," said the admiral, here on a tour of naval establishments. "That includes Pearl Harbor. Most of the damage done there has been repaired.

"And one thing you want to remember is that we are very conservative in our claims. When we say a ship is sunk, she's sunk."

Dutch Appeal To Roosevelt

of Hoogkarspel.

The Germans previously took 1600 other hostages, including the country's social and intellectual leaders. Five of them were executed at dawn yesterday after deadline for the capture of the train wreckers expired at midnight Friday.

It was believed that the Germans had extended the deadline another 48 hours before continuing the executions. Dutch quarters here believed that the Germans might not announce further executions and would carry them out a few at a time rather than on a mass scale to prevent demonstrations in a country where they are trying to strengthen their position against a possible Allied invasion.

A Dutch spokesman here said he believed the Germans would carry out those executions within ten days if the saboteurs are not caught.

The appeal to President Roosevelt came after Netherlands Premier Pieter S. Gerbrandy, in a broadcast to Holland Saturday night, said that when the war is over the Germans responsible for the slaughter would be tried in Dutch courts and sentenced to death.

Despite the executions, "underground" reports from Holland said the Germans were faced with an increasing sabotage and a wave of "mysterious deaths" of their soldiers, many of whom are being found dead in canals. The Germans were reported to be issuing Dutch army uniforms to men who guard military installations, hoping to fool the Dutch people into thinking the soldiers were their own countrymen.

Information reaching the Netherlands government said that during the past two months Dutch patriots destroyed 40 German freight trains, set fire to five German planes and destroyed a store of torpedoes and ammunition, burned a supply depot and blew up three ammunition trucks at Haarlem.

Other reports said that the Germans had executed one of the most famed members of the Dutch underground organization—Marie Dehaas, who led a sabotage ring which caused much destruction.

Meanwhile the British radio reported 400 French workers were arrested by the Germans in a Paris suburb for striking.

Moslems Won't Bow to Hindus

bility that the government might negotiate with the virtually outlawed Congress Party leaders, notwithstanding that they are jailed or in custody.

States Position

Contrary to his usual custom, Jinnah wore Mohammedan clothes during the half-hour interview. He added a fancy Occidental touch—dancing pumps and gray socks.

Jinnah described his position thus: As head of the Moslem League, he had offered at the outbreak of the war to cooperate with the British government. He has repeatedly given the same assurance. But the Congress Party, composed mostly of Hindu political elements, although it has a minority of Moslem representation, consistently has held back, he said.

Consequently the British have been continually placating the Hindus with greater and greater offers of a share in the government. Each concession, he said, held greater possibilities of harm to the Moslem population.

The Moslem Party leader spoke in his private study in his mansion on Bombay's exclusive Malabar Hills, and then went into conference with 21 members of his league's working committee.

Jinnah declared that the Moslem League, because it early had agreed to cooperate in the war effort, had been shunted aside repeatedly.

"The British repeatedly have said they would consider no agreement with Indians that did not hinge on the All-Indian Congress," he said. "If the Congress should be installed in power, it would be the end of the Moslems in India."

Jinnah has said repeatedly, and he repeated today, that he would be glad to form a provisional government.

"Naturally it would be necessary to obtain the support of all groups, including the Congress," he said.

His meeting with his working committee suggested that he, too, might be considering action like that of Gandhi, which might also land him in confinement.

Singh Appeals for Unity

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—J. J. Singh, president of the India League of America and a former member of the All-India Congress committee, today cable an appeal to Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, to "create unity to defeat the Axis."

"This is an appeal from your countrymen abroad," the cable read, "today's (Monday's) Moslem League meeting will go down in history. You can help to bring peace and freedom or bloodshed to India. Beg you to create unity to defeat the Axis."

Greenwood Urges Truce

London (Monday), Aug. 17 (AP).—Arthur Greenwood, former minister without portfolio in the Churchill cabinet, urged in the name of the British Labor Party that the British government make clear it would resume self-government discussions with Indian leaders upon abandonment of the civil disobedience campaign by the All-India Congress Party.

In a radio broadcast to North America, Greenwood, said Mohandas K. Gandhi is "utterly oblivious to the urgency and gravity of the world situation."

Greenwood said the "world does not expect that President Roosevelt's four freedoms and the wide declarations contained in the Atlantic Charter can be implemented until we begin to reap the fruits of victory . . . There can be no future even for nonbelligerents apart from a victory for the Allies."

Sapru Urges Negotiation

Allahabad, India, Aug. 16 (AP).—Sir Tej Bahadar Sapru, India's most prominent lawyer who has served in the past as intermediary between the British and Mohandas K. Gandhi, urged today that Britain send a parliamentary delegation to India to discuss settlement of the Indian question with Congress Party leaders.

Sapru himself is understood to be preparing to visit the British viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, at New Delhi.

"The political issues should be tackled with constructive statesmenship, imagination and courage," Sapru added in a prepared statement.

"In my opinion things have not gone so far that mutual discussion with broad-minded members of Parliament can be ruled out as impossible—impossible either on the ground of prestige or the ground that they would be evidence of weakness."

Skater, 48, Kills Girl Companion, 17, And Then Himself

Idaho Springs, Colo., Aug. 16 (AP).—A middle-aged married man fatally shot a pretty high school girl who had been his ice-skating partner, scribbled a note asking that they be buried together with skates on and then took his own life, Coroner George Hamlik reported today.

Fishermen found the bodies of Maggie Bolton, 17, and John G. (Jack) Kline, 48-year-old electrician, in an automobile on a lonely mountain road yesterday. At least one of several penciled notes left by Kline was written after he put a .32-caliber revolver bullet through the girl's head, while they were seated in Kline's automobile, Hamllik said.

"I don't suppose it is possible, but we would like to be buried together," the note read. "Margie did not suffer. She died at once."

U. S. Bombers Held Unsuited To Hit Nazis

By William W. White
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Aug. 16.—A redisposition of Royal Air Force and American Air Force heavy bombers which may postpone a separate but coordinated Anglo-American super-bombing offensive against Germany, promised for the near future by leaders of both forces, is being considered by the high command of the two air powers, competent observers believed today.

The tip-off that the joint offensive in which American crews in American planes would augment Britain's mounting blows at industrial Germany might be delayed came in a story in the Sunday Times by Peter Masefield, its authoritative air correspondent, who declared flatly:

"American heavy bombers—the latest Fortresses and Liberators—are fine flying machines but not suited for bombing in Germany. Their bombs and bomb loads are small, their armor and armament are not up to the standard now found necessary and their speeds are low.

Spirit Is Magnificent

"The spirit and training of the American air crews is magificent, but they have neither the types of aircraft nor the experience of the peculiar conditions to be able to do justice to themselves in the immediate future, nor in direct attacks on Germany," Masefield wrote.

Emphasizing that Britain with its long experience has a duty to insure that "the flower of America's Regular Army Air Force is not squandered," he said:

"If one may venture an honest and constructive criticism from this country, it is that America's greatest production need would seem to be to turn over her vast potential to new and improved types of heavy bombers without delay. She owes it to her men and to the Allied cause."

From any other of London's air correspondents the story might not assume such importance, but Masefield has often spoken for the government on air matters in his Sunday column.

Trade Suggested

Since the "unsuitable" American bombers must not be pushed into night offensives over strongly defended areas—and still less wasted in daylight offensives—Masefield suggests that the British heavy bombers, which were designed specifically for raiding Germany, be brought back from their Atlantic patrols and turned over to American airmen who are anxious to have a crack at Germany. British crews could then use the American bombers for the also important but less spectacular routine patrols over the Atlantic in search of enemy submarines and surface raiders.

Masefield does not say it in so many words, but obviously he shares the R. A. F.'s fears of what may happen if the Americans are committed to daylight bombings. In addition to Masefield's criticisms of the American bombers, it has also been stated that they were not suitable for night bombing since they are not yet equipped with exhaust flame extinguishers and would therefore present themselves as a flaming beacon in night operations in fighter-infested skies.

The story was widely discussed in London today but American air force headquarters would make no formal statement, although the American views on the subject may be aired tomorrow at a press conference. It came as something of a shock in view of the articles published Saturday in an American technical publication by Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, who promised:

"The time is not very far off when the British and American bomber squadrons in England will be able to destroy the power of Germany at a rate which outstrips repair."

Second War Budget May Top 90 Billions

Would Boost U. S. Cost Thus Far To 180 Billions

By the Associated Press

Work has started on the second war budget of the United States, and informed fiscal officials yesterday guessed that it might exceed 90 billion dollars.

The Budget Bureau already has sent notices out to all governmental agencies asking them how much money they think they will need for the fiscal year which will begin July 1, 1943. Hearings will start in September, the bureau will help President Roosevelt revise the requests in December, and he will transmit the budget to Congress in January.

Because of all these steps yet to be taken, officials explained it was impossible to predict accurately what the total request will be. However, they feel that the budget will be based not so much on what department heads request as it will on the estimated productive capacity of the Nation's war industries. At present price levels, estimates of this capacity approximate 85 billion dollars per year. However, possible price increases and shifts in production types may boost the cost in dollars of the second war budget over 90 billions.

Barring an unexpected early peace, officials are sure only that the budget will be the largest in the history of any nation on earth. The current year's spending, already at record proportions, is estimated by the Budget Bureau at 77 billion dollars.

At these rates, the first two years of the present war will cost roughly 180 billions—which can be compared with the aggregate spending of the Treasury of $197,180,000,000 from the day George Washington became President in 1789 until Pearl Harbor was bombed in 1941.

Treasury spending now is at the rate of five billions per month. By winter it is expected to reach a steady rate of nearly eight billions per month.

Japs Foiled

New Record Process Saves Jukes

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 16.—Here's a little cheerful news, just dished out from the juke box front for American music lovers—and jitterbugs.

Tune boxes will keep right on grinding out the poetry of tunesmiths, despite the shellac shortage, if the claims for a new discovery in phonograph record making—with all American materials—stand up.

Although they seem to be having a hard time defending them, it is no military secret that the Japs captured practically all the Tachardia Lacca bugs in existence when they swept down through Java a few months ago.

No Need For Bugs Now

And the "Lac" insect (or did you know?) is the mite which, carefully cultivated, grows fat and juicy and is (or was) ground up to make shellac. Literally speaking, then, all phonograph records heretofore—made of shellac—were full of bugs.

"As far as we're concerned, the Japs can keep the bugs after they give up the islands to our Marines," declared Nat Cohn, distributor of the new records made by the Capitol Records Co., said today.

"An American inventor has delivered a new process for record making, which is a secret, but which stands up under the most gruelling test in juke boxes. It not only wears longer, but it won't break as easily as the old records did."

Record-makers suffered when the War Production Board reduced the use of shellac by 60 per cent for civilian use two months ago.

Year's Supply Ready

Then, according to Cohn, along came George H. Clark, a New Jersey inventor, with a substance for records that included no shellac.

A company was formed with Buddy de Sylva, movie executive, as president, and Johnny Mercer, songwriter, as vice president.

Soon after the Capitol company was organized and had started production, President James C. Petrillo of the A. F. of L.-American Federation of Musicians banned record making for commercial use by union members After August 1.

"Between the struggles of new production and this new headache, we had trouble," Cohn said, "but we worked night and day and turned out a year's supply in a hurry.

"We've got everything it takes right here in America."

Banns Across the Sea

London, Aug. 16 (INS).—American soldiers in Great Britain have been given official permission to marry while in active service, it was disclosed tonight.

However, such marriages must be preceded by three months notice. The soldiers' wives will be granted full pay allowances.

German claims.

An indication that tremendous air battles were being fought along the erupting Russian front from the Caucasus to the north was seen in the official reports that during the week ending last Saturday the Germans lost 369 airplanes against 241 Soviet planes lost.

The Soviet communique again reported battles in areas southeast of Kletskaya, where the Germans have pushed through Russian lines to the Don River and are attempting to exploit their gains and northeast of Kotelnikovski, where regrounped German forces are struggling to force their way to Stalingrad from the southwest.

The war report acknowledged that the Germans had made a minor gain by driving a wedge into the advance defense positions of one infantry regiment on the Kletskaya front but countered with a report that an infantry unit fighting northeast of Kotelnikovski repulsed several enemy attacks and then routed a Rumanian regiment.

Krasnodar Attack Repulsed

In the Caucasus fighting flamed along a 200-mile front from Krasnodar to Mineralnye Vody.

The Russians reported their troops repulsed fierce attacks of enemy tanks and motorized infantry in the Krasnodar area of the northwest Caucasus, destroying nine tanks, 12 trucks and five guns and killing more than 300 Germans.

A further German gain deep in the Caucasus was acknowledged when the communique said Red soldiers fell back to new positions under the pressure of numerically superior enemy forces.

They continued fighting, however, the report added.

The Germans in the Caucasus face a stalwart Russian defense in mountain spurs guarding the Black Sea ports of Novorossisk and Tuapse, but the main German thrust had turned eastward toward the Caspian and the Grozny oil field.

It was in that latter area the Soviets were forced again to give ground.

Voronezh Front See-Saws

Far to the north, in the Voronezh area, the Germans and Russians were fighting in the streets after the Nazis broke into a populated place, not identified, on the west bank of the Don River.

In other engagements in the Voronezh area, the midnight communique said, the Russians threw back German attempts to regain defense lines lost in earlier fighting.

On the northern sections of the winding Caucasus to Baltic front, the Russians continued to drive forward in counterattacks, reporting considerable success. The enemy was forced out of a populated place near Bryansk, southwest of Moscow, and in the Voronezh zone the Soviet information bureau stated simply, "Our troops advanced, killing about 1200 Germans." Important heights were reported captured, and a forest retaken which the Germans had won in a counterattack.

In the battle for Stalingrad the Germans were employing new smashing tactics, coupling masses of self-propelled artillery with tanks and motorized infantry to break Soviet lines. But Marshal Semeon Timoshenko had by now massed artillery, the Red army's "God of War," which smashed the Nazi machine to a standstill before Moscow last autumn, to oppose the enemy.

The Enemy's Claim

(After announcing several days ago that the battle of the Don Bend was concluded, the German high command today said it forces in the northeastern loop of the bend "broke through enemy positions and penetrated to the Don." Rearguard resistance in the Caucasus was broken, it declared, and German troops were "pressing forward in a continuous advance."

(The Russians were said to be attacking southeast of Lake Ilmen and on the Volkhov, below Leningrad, and at Vyazma and Rzhev, west of Moscow, where 71 Red army tanks were declared to have been destroyed. The Germans claimed success in local counterattacks at Voronezh.)

Bringing to bear superior numbers in the Don bend, German Marshal Fedor von Bock swung the battle from south of Kletskaya to the southeast of that Cossack town but the Russians still were holding within the bulge of the river.

The Don here bends toward the Volga to a point 45 miles southeast of Kletskaya and but 30 miles northwest of Stalingrad.

Today's midday communique said the Germans tried their heaviest blows many times in this sector, rushing artillery forward on tank treads to support their armored and motorized infantry divisions, but were repulsed each time.

A military dispatch in Red Star described in detail one of these battles. Enemy tanks battered a Soviet division front steadily, advancing despite losses which left the steppes littered with corpses and wrecked machines. Under the pressure Russian infantry lost several important points and a major breakthrough was threatened. But a Red artillery regiment rushed immediately into battle after a long march, helped repulse the attacks and restore the original position.

After meeting their initial rebuff, the Germans concentrated considerable forces behind a screen of 100 tanks and attacked a narrow sector, aiming to wedge between two infantry regiments. The Russians countered by massing heavy guns behind the gap and on both sides, providing a murderous crossfire as well as a frontal hail of steel.

Into this area the Germans advanced in triangular formation. Red artillery and infantry opened up with fire from weapons of all calibers which first crumbled the enemy's left flank and then forced the entire wedge to retreat in disorder.

Artillery again rushed to the rescue when the Germans later tried to outflank the division by attacking in a neighboring sector. As the enemy tank groups came over the horizon, raising clouds of dust and driving forward in waves expecting an easy victory, the big guns again hurled them back.

Red army artillery was reported to be firing from well-camouflaged positions in deep undergrowth on the banks of the Don, not only opening with point-blank fire along the front line but also pounding at long range the German concentrations in the rear.

Army Colonel's Daughter Held As Suspect in Officer's Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ARRESTED—Miss Margaret Herlihy was charged at Douglas, Ariz., in the fatal shooting Saturday of her fiance, Capt. D. D. Carr, United States Army, who was stationed at Fort Huachuca. She is the daughter of Lieut. Col. E. G. Herlihy. Police said that the shooting occurred at the Herlihy home

By the Associated Press

Douglas, Ariz., Aug. 16.—Deputy County Attorney Norman Herring said today he planned to file a murder charge against Miss Margaret Herlihy, pretty daughter of an Army officer, in connection with the fatal shooting of her fiance, Capt. D. D. Carr.

Carr died last night, less than 24 hours after he was shot twice in the Herlihy home, Police Chief Percy Bowden reported. Miss Herlihy was charged with assault with a deadly weapon a few hours before his death, but Herring said the complaint would be changed to murder probably tomorrow.

Lieut. Col. E. G. Herlihy, infantry commander at Fort Huachuca, issued a statement in which he said he found marks of a beating on his daughter and that "I am convinced she was fighting for her life" against Carr.

Carr, 27, attached to an antitank division at Fort Huachuca, and Miss Herlihy, who were to have been married September 15, had been to Agua Prieta, a Mexican resort across the border, preceding the shooting.

"Carr apparently resented the fact that we planned to take Margaret with us to Fort Benning, Ga., where I have been transferred," Colonel Herlihy asserted. "We had always opposed this engagement but did not interfere as our daughter was over 21 years old and we thought things would work out."

Witness Describes Big Convoy Battle

Wednesday about 9:30 a. m. 20 big twin-engined bombers carried out a high-level attack. They all dropped bombs. One fell very near a merchant ship. She was damaged and her engines stopped. (Soon afterwards she started again.)

Surprise for Torpedo Planes

"Then we saw about a dozen torpedo bombers coming in on the starboard side close to the sea. We had a surprise for them which they showed no liking for. We put up a barrage with high explosive shells. I have never seen anything like it. Our shells were exploding in a huge wall of flame, smoke and flying splinters. The planes made no attempt to face such a colossal barrage. They turned away. We saw no torpedo tracks.

"Later 20 Stukas broke through and screamed down at the ships. One dived down at us. Tracer shells and pom poms were pumped at him in red streams. I could see pieces flying off the plane. But the pilot kept on and a big bomb plunged into the sea very near to us.

"A few minutes later seven dive bombers appeared suddenly out of the blue and dive-bombed a carrier. They roared down one after another and she disappeared from our sight behind climbing spires of water. But she was still steaming along when she came into our view again."

17 Carried to Flaming Death When Army Transport Plane Crashes

wreck. He was taken later to St. Luke's Hospital in Pittsfield, where he was given a 50-50 chance for recovery.

The Army said that an investigation of the crash, which occurred at 9:30 p. m., already was under way and that a crew from Westover Field was at work recovering the bodies, some of which already had been brought out. The plane was on a routine mission out of Pope Field, Fort Braggs, N. C., the Army said, and left Mitchel Field early last evening.

Peru's civilian defense aircraft observation unit first sighted the big craft as it plunged down among the pine trees 16 miles east of Pittsfield, and notified State police. Then, by firing shtotguns in answer to the shots from Sergeant Lee's gun, they closed in on the survivor and finally found him.

Except for loss of the airship Akron on April 4, 1933, in which 73 men died, and the crash of a converted airliner at Premier, W. Va., on July 1, which killed 21 soldiers, last night's crash was the worst in the history of United States military aviation, either Army or Navy.

Rescue attempts by citizens of Peru, augmented by soldiers, doctors, nurses, woodsmen and other volunteers, were made under the most difficult conditions.

Battling darkness that made their task "like walking in an inkpot," they were aided only by the distant light of the burning plane, and by red flares and flashlights.

So narrow and winding were the roads stretching from the nearest main highway that only one car could pass at a time and oftentimes machines going in opposite directions were forced into small gullies by the roadside.

Ambulances, hearses, troop trucks and police cars negotiated the dangerous terrain at slow speed and sometimes guides with flashlights ran ahead to keep the roads clear.

As soon as the Army regulars reached the wreckage, a strong guard was posted throughout the area and civilians not engaged in rescue work were kept almost 2 miles away.

Officers in charge of rescue operations said that all bodies probably would be brought out of the wilderness by midnight, but added "Disposition of the wreckage has not yet been decided upon." The list of the dead has not been made public.

Navy Plane Crash Kills Instructor; Cadet Hurt

Chicago, Aug. 16 (AP).—Second Lieut. Rolfe N. Berge, Minneapolis Marine reservist, was killed today and Aviation Cadet Paul M. Simundza suffered minor face injuries and a broken jaw when their plane crashed on a routine training flight near suburban Barrington.

The Public Realtions Office at Great Lakes Naval Training Station said Lieutenant Berge crashed from a low altitude while instructing in forced landing procedure.

Area at Fort Dix Made 'Off Limits' After Homicide

Fort Dix, N. J., Aug. 16 (AP).—Col. Cassius M. Dowell, commanding officer of Fort Dix, today ordered the tavern section of Pointville "off limits" for military personnel of the post after an early morning dispute in which one soldier was killed. The identity of the victim, a member of a Negro Battalion, was not disclosed.

The post public relations office said the trouble started in a taproom when military police suggested that a number of soldiers leave a bar at the midnight closing hour. The statement continued:

"The soldiers became surly and one brandished a knife. The knife-wielder was struck on the arm with a night stick by an M. P. and dropped the knife. His companions, meanwhile, returned to their barracks across the steet to secure rifles.

"In the excitement that followed on soldier was shot and later he died at the station hospital. The shot was fired accidentally by a fellow soldier. The military police did not fire a shot."

All weapons and ammuntion in the all-Negro outfit were being examined to determine which gun fired the fatal shot.

Harvey Mills, 47, of 113 South Fenwick Street, Arlington, received burns and shock while working on a transformer at a powerhouse at 510 Tenth Street Northwest. Their condition was described as "improving" after treatment at Emergency Hospital.

William T. Core, of 1410 M Street Northwest, operator of the power plant, witnessed the accident and called an ambulance. Privates S. R. Russell and R. G. Thompson of No. 1 Precinct Station, investigated.

Fire Checked Short Of Furniture Store

Firemen last night extinguished a blaze which nearly burned into the rear of the Mayer & Co. frunlture store, 421-23 Seventh Street Northwest. A rear door was charred but no damage was done to the interior of the building, firemen said.

Origin of the fire, which started about 10 p. m. in a trashbox close to the building, was undetermined. A large crowd was attracted.

WLB to Hear Steel Case Tomorrow

Higgins Here To Revive Ship Talks

By Robert Lasch

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Andrew J. Higgins of New Orleans has come quietly back to the Capital to renew discussions with Government officials over events leading up to the cancellation of his shipbuilding contract by the Maritime Commission, it was learned yesterday.

Higgins has conferred with attorneys of the Department of Justice, antitrust division, about his case. At the time his contract to build 200 Liberty ships in a new assembly-line shipyard at New Orleans was canceled, Higgins charged that representatives of established shipbuilders had worked against him in the Navy and Maritime Commission. He also accused dollar-a-year men in the Government of protecting established industrial interests against possible competition of a newcomer in the shipbuilding field.

No Formal Inquiry

Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, categorically denied that any such influences contributed to the contract cancellation.

Although such allegations could be assumed to interest the antitrust division, which has charged several industrial combinations with hampering the war effort through attempts to eliminate competition, a representative of the Justice Department said it would be inaccurate to assert that the department is conducting a formal investigation of the Higgins case.

Higgins, it was said, had expressed a desire to tell his story to department representatives, and spent three hours last week going into the circumstances surrounding his rise as a builder of naval torpedo boats and landing craft, his acceptance of a contract to build larger ships for the Maritime Commission, and the cancelation of that contract in July on announced grounds of a steel shortage.

To Meet Senate Group

The Justice Department is not concerning itself with charges by Higgins and his son, Frank, about a "black market" in steel, it was reported. OPA attorneys last week filed a suit arising out of these charges.

Higgins is expected to confer while here with representatives of the Senate Committee on National Defense, headed by Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat) of Missouri. He appeared before the committee in public session on his previous visit, and has had several private meetings with its members.

On his previous visit Higgins moved about Washington in a fanfare of publicity, but yesterday he declined to see reporters and refused to make a statement.

Retroactive Pay Date Is Big Issue Board Must Decide

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

"Big steel" will have its inning before the War Labor Board tomorrow when it will argue why it should not be directed to grant the same wage and union concessions which the board voted a month ago in the "little steel" case.

The board, composed of 12 members—four each representing the public, employe and employer—will hold an open session to hear representatives from both the U. S. Steel Corporation and the United Steel Workers of America (C. I. O.) The dispute affects 250,000 workers.

Three issues are involved in the "big steel" case—granting of a 5½ cents an hour wage increase, maintenance of union membership and the check-off system in collecting dues. All three points were won by the C. I. O. union in the "little steel" case, although the union had originally demanded a wage boost of $1 a day.

Observers are confident that the Labor Board, using the voluminous testimony presented before it in the "little steel" controversy, will not hesitate in approving the union membership clause and the check-off. However, these same observers believe that while the board, too, will grant the 5½ cents an hour boost, the thorn of difference will be over the date of retroactivity.

The wage boost in the "little steel" case was made retroactive to last February, when the dispute was certified to the Labor Board. However, the "big steel" case was certified only 10 days ago. The steel workers union wants its wage increase to go back to February, too, despite the recent certification of its appeal.

Two of the biggest U. S. Steel Corporation plants are located in the Chicago area—Carnegie-Illinois, south works, and the Gary works.

The board's hearing is expected to require only a few hours. A decision is expected within a week.

C.I.O. Group Ratifies Bethlehem Contract

By the Associated Press

The 30-man policy committee of the C. I. O. United Steel Workers of America from plants of the Bethlehem Steel Company yesterday unanimously ratified the union's first contract with the company.

Bethlehem is the only one of the four "little steel" companies with which the union does not now have a contract following the recent War Labor Board ruling boosting steel workers' pay.

Van A. Bittner, assistant to Philip Murray, union president, said the terms of the contract would be announced today at Pittsburgh. Other committee members, declining to be quoted by name, disclosed that the contract was similar to those already in effect in other plants of the "little steel" group. They said it had been approved last week by the Bethlehem management and would be in effect for one year after its formal signature by union officials.

Now Is Time to Feed Europe, Norman Thomas Tells Forum

Shipment of supplementary food supplies to Europe's starving millions—on an experimental basis and without awaiting an Allied invasion—was urged last night by Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, in a debate on "When Should We Start Feeding Europe?"

Thomas spoke on the American Forum of the Air in debate with Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of Union Now, Inc., and Mrs. Lily Krier-Becker of Luxembourg, member of the Free World Association, who took the stand that feeding of occupied lands must await Allied invasion lest such support aid Hitler. Miss Mary Hillyer, executive director of the Post-War Council, supported Thomas.

The Socialist leader proposed that such commodities as milk, fats, vitamins and perhaps wheat should be sent to supplement the meager rations now issued to the subject countries. Such aid, he said, should be stopped if it were taken advantage of by Hitler.

"Even little candles of humanitarian effort may yet serve to keep men aware that there is still a light of hope in human kindliness," Thomas said, adding that "the thousands upon thousands of mothers watching the slow and twisted growth of their children" are blaming the Anglo-American blockade, second to Hitler's cruelty, for their troubles.

Mrs. Krier-Becker declared that "those starving Europeans now feel with their brain and prefer to tighten the belt rather than to help the enemy." She added: "The moment to start feeding Europe will come with the landing of Allied armies in one of the western European countries."

Kingdon said that it was a part of United Nations strategy "to reduce the supply of food for the peoples at war with us. The bitter reality of warfare demands that we shall push to the limit every advantage we have so that through suffering the aggressor nations will learn the tragic folly of their governments. . . ."

"If we take any load off their resources, we are actually contributing to their fighting strength and their civic morale."

Miss Hillyer contended that food could be sent to Europe without aiding Hitler by the same international agreement under which grain was sent to Greece.

"Every day we delay we are responsible for rising casualty lists from starvation, for the weakening of the peoples of the future because of undernourishment of the children and for the deterioration of morale . . ."

Huston Thompson, former Assistant Attorney General, was moderator. The program was held at the Shoreham Hotel, and was broadcast by WOL and the Mutual Broadcasting System.

N.Y. Police Remove Plaque in Memory Of Mrs. Roosevelt

New York, Aug. 16 (AP).—A plaque to the memory to Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt was removed from a flagpole in Roosevelt Park by police today, the action drawing immediate protest from participants in the dedication ceremony and a sharp reply from Park Commissioner Robert Moses.

No sooner had a police lieutenant removed the plaque, explaining that he was under orders from Moses, than Harry H. Schlacht, chairman of the ceremony, read a telegram of greeting and appreciation which he said had come from President Roosevelt.

The action was denounced by Joseph Plumeri, chairman of the Roosevelt Park committee, as "very cheap" but he admitted permission to place the plaque had been withheld pending approval by the municipal art commission.

Moses said Schlacht had asked permission to hold the ceremony but the commissioner said he replied "there were enough plaques in the park and that this one would contribute nothing that was not already covered." Schlacht denied Moses' version of the affair, saying Plumeri had applied for permission.

AFL-CIO Representatives Meet This Week to Map Unity Parley

By the United Press

The opening steps in a renewed effort to bring about C. I. O.-A. F. of L. unity will be taken this week when representatives of the two rival labor organizations meet to set a time and place for a formal "peace" conference.

Chairman Harry Bates of the A. F. of L.'s standing peace committee was understood yesterday to have had some preliminary discussions with C. I. O. President Philip Murray concerning the conference. They were expected to complete final arrangements at a preliminary meeting within a few days.

The forthcoming conference will mark the third time the two organizations have come together to attempt some form of peace and unity. A. F. of L. President William Green said at the recent Chicago meeting of his organiaztion's executive council that a solution of the difficulties between the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. will take "many months," and asked the public to be patient pending results.

Labor experts pointed out that any over-all peace formula will have to be founded on a series of agreements between individual and competing unions. For example, there are parallel C. I. O. and A. F. of L. unions among electrical, textile, maritime and other industry workers.

"The conferees will first have to work out a formula by which these conflicting unions individually can make peace before any over-all peace plan can be evolved," one spokesman said. "It will be a tedious and arduous job and is bound to take a long time."

The first attempt towards unity came in 1937, but broke up without result following more than a month of conferences. The second, called at the request of President Roosevelt in 1939, also failed after two months of discussions.

John L. Lewis was head of the C. I. O. at the time of both conferences. Although the C. I. O. now is under Murray's leadership, many observers continue to view with pessimism the prospects of a merger which, according to an A. F. L. spokesman, will be the principal aim of the forthcoming talks.

Deductions Taxes May Be Shelved

would be 5 per cent, and beginning January 1, 1944, the rate would be 10 per cent. At the same time, Senator Clark pointed out, the Treasury, under the individual income rates in the House-approved bill, would collect taxes on 1942 income based on a normal rate of 6 per cent and surtaxes ranging from 19 per cent on the first dollar of taxable income up to 82 per cent on incomes of more than five million dollars. Then in 1944, when the withholding tax goes up to 10 per cent, taxpayers would have to pay the amount of the 1943 income tax due over the 5 per cent withheld at the source during 1943.

Evidently reflecting the view of the subcommittee as well as the prevailing sentiment in the full committee, Senator Clark said he favored putting taxpayers on a current basis, thus indorsing in principle at least the "pay-as-you-go" tax plan submited to the committee by Beardsley Ruml, treasurer of R. H. Macy, Inc., and chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

As the result of the strength of the Ruml plan in the finance committee, Treasury experts were said to be working on a "pay-as-you-go" plan of their own to be submitted to the Senate committee if the withholding tax principle is to be retained in the bill.

Briefly the Ruml plan proposes that payments made this year on 1941 income be treated as payment on 1942 income, thereby relieving taxpayers of the payment of taxes in 1943 on 1942 income. In effect the tax on 1941 income would be "forgotten" and the collection of income taxes be put on a current income basis.

Although the finance committee will not get down to real work on the bill before August 24, its membership may be brought face-to-face with the realization that revenue total of the House bill will have to be increased by at least $2,500,000,000.

The House version of the bill, according to Treasury estimates will raise no more than $6,271,000,000 in additional revenue, whereas the Treasury has requested $8,700,000,000 as the minimum for the taxation segment of President Roosevelt's antiinflation program, revision of which may be announced soon with every indication that the tax phase will certainly not be below the Treasury's recommendation.

Since Congressional leaders several weeks ago advised Mr. Roosevelt not to ask for additional antiinflation legislation but to use his war powers to stabilize wages and prices, Justice Samuel I. Rosenman of the New York Supreme Court, has been working on the new program. Several developments in farm prices and wage increases over recent weeks indicate that the Administration's new approach cannot long be delayed.

This was emphasized yesterday by instructions from the Budget Bureau to the various agencies calling for their estimates for the next fiscal year to be presented to Congress in January. On the basis of the 77 billion dollar budget for the current fiscal year, indications were that the requirements of the fiscal year of 1944 may pass 90 billion dollars, a figure which emphasized the meagerness of the present tax measure.

New York Central Promotes Metzman

Cincinnati, Aug. 15 (AP).—Gustav Metzman today was named assistant vice president and general manager of the New York Central System in charge of the Big Four territory.

Metzman was assistant vice president in charge of operations in Chicago for two years prior to last March, when he went to Washington as chief of the rail division of the War Department's Transportation Corps.

A native of Baltimore, he has been in the railroad business nearly 40 years.

Real Coordination

Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, the President's familiar, is now reported to have evolved a tentative plan for the establishment of an "economic authority" to bring about a united front among agencies that are shaping the Nation's major economic policies. That is an appealing idea. Certainly we must find a way to stop working at cross-purposes, to stem the tide of inflation that is now rising, and to harness our economy securely to the military requirements of the United Nations. If Judge Rosenman can devise an effective means of achieving that aim, he will earn the lasting gratitude of all free peoples.

The task is admittedly difficult. Such agencies as WPB, OPA and WLB have definite administrative duties to carry out. Undoubtedly each should continue to be held responsible for successful operation in its respective field. No czar in charge of an "economic authority" could be sufficiently expert in the management of war production, the stabilization of prices, or the settlement of labor disputes, for example, to assume full responsibility for the work now done by three separate agencies. Hence it is reasonable to conclude that the proposed board or authority should have no czar. It ought to be a body that would bring together representatives of the various agencies for ironing out conflicts and establishing unified policies on approval by the President.

Perhaps the greatest danger, however, is that the proposed "authority" will become just another of those coordinating agencies which make a good showing on paper and do nothing to eliminate conflicts of policy. Of window dressing of this sort, we have had plenty, and we need no more. In time of war such window dressing is positively detrimental, because it lulls the public into a false impression that mistakes are being corrected when actually they are not. Too many loosely organized units of this kind are already confusing the war effort. Clearly the ideal to be sought is a board that will have power to keep all agencies directing war work pulling in the same direction, without seriously interfering with the good work now being done by some of them. A high degree of genius will be required to outline and set up such a board. Nevertheless the effort should be made, and the onrush of baffling economic problems suggests that the experiment should not be long delayed.

Sticking To Facts

One of the surest signs of an able administrator is the capacity to acknowledge departmental inadequacies publicly and to move promptly to remedy them. A good many of our civilian administrators seem to be quite without this capacity, but not Secretary Stimson. He has recognized the shortcomings of Army publicity, and he has ordered a drastic reorganization that will make it literally impossible to repeat stories like the now infamous air-raid "marker" fantasy which was released by Army public relations officers. Reorganization has apparently been under way for some time, and the need for it could hardly have been high-lighted in more striking fashion.

Obviously, as the Secretary says, there is no place in the Army for promoters of news. From the very beginning the war effort has suffered from a superabundance of press agentry. That is to say, we have had too much "build-up" by agencies which have gratuitously assumed the job of sustaining national morale. If a case can be made for this activity on the part of some of the civilian agencies it certainly cannot be made for the War Department, whose press officers' primary function is to stick to unembellished facts that can be made available to the public.

The reduction of the War Department's separate press agencies by 75 per cent and the consolidation of the rest is designed to facilitate over-all direction of the Army's public relations. Doubtless this will be the case. In the process of correcting past abuses, however, it is to be hoped that the reduction in the number of press officers will not mean a reduction in the volume of authentic news about the Army.

Undoubtedly the reorganization and, more particularly, the repercussions of the air-marker story, will tend to make press officers scrutinize prospective releases with far greater care. This is as it should be. But Major General Surles, the head of Army public relations, ought to take special pains to impress upon his associates the fact that the over-all informational purpose remains the same. That is, of course, promptly to make public just as much news as possible, so long as it does not help the enemy.

"Equalizing" Wages

The War Labor Board has developed a formula for dealing with demands for wage increases which, if strictly adhered to, would enable the WLB to dispose more or less automatically of the cases that come before it. Whatever opinion one may hold as to the wisdom of the cost-of-living formula enunciated in the "Little Steel" case, there can be no dispute on that score. The WLB would be headed for plenty of trouble, however, if it should liberalize this guiding principle by undertaking, in addition, to "equalize" wage rates in accordance with the recommendations of the panel report on the General Motors case. The panel concludes that G. M. employes are entitled to a double increase. First, there is an increase in pay of a cent and a half per hour to offset the rise in living costs since the beginning of 1941, and, second, there is a further increase of 3½ cents per hour in order to bring G. M. rates of pay closer to the top levels paid by the Ford company.

Following President Roosevelt's rather vague directions, the WLB is expected to raise substandard wage rates. Indeed, it has just approved extensive increases in the wages of textile workers on the ground that current rates are still substandard despite recent increases. Nobody would have the temerity, however, to argue that the wages paid General Motors employes are substandard, unless "substandard" is redefined to mean any rates of pay short of the highest paid by any employer for the same type of work. On the contrary, G. M. employes are a superstandard group earning close to an average of $1.15 hourly for a working week of between 45 and 46 hours. Although that average compares favorably with the general average for the industry, the panel recommends that the rates be raised to offset in part the differential between G. M. and Ford rates of pay. In other words, equalization under this plan ceases to be a device for eliminating glaring inequalities in rates of compensation and becomes a device for boosting wage rates toward the level of the highest paid competing workers. Since Ford employes now have a request for wage increases pending before a WLB panel, it is easy to see what complications might result from acceptance of this kind of "evening-up" formula.

The findings of the G. M. panel give especial point to a statement by Dr. Leo Wolman in a recent article published in The Post called "The New Parity." Mr. Wolman stressed the dangers and difficulties of attempts to apply a wage-equalization formula in addition to a cost-of-living formula. Calling attention to the great diversity in wage scales within the same industry as well as between different industries, he said: "Any effort to bring these diverse wage scales even approximately into line with one another, let alone equalizing them with the scales of higher paid industries, will cause a large advance in wages and payrolls, further increases in public expenditures, since the Government is the sole purchaser of the industry's product, and new demands for equalization by less-favored employes." This is a warning that might well be appended to the G. M. panel report which the WLB now has under consideration.

Ballots For Soldiers

It was apparent when Congress first began to talk about permitting men in the armed services to vote that ballots could not be put into the hands of every soldier, sailor and marine. Battles cannot be stopped to enable men to vote. Nor can this normal function of citizenship be exercised in Army camps when it might result in giving valuable information to the enemy. In time of war even the conditions under which ballots may be cast must be adjusted to military necessity.

When essential precautions against interference with military or naval duty have been taken, however, the desirability of preserving the right of men in uniform to vote is scarcely open to question. These men probably have a greater interest in public affairs than they have ever had before. It would be a travesty of the democratic system which they are defending to deny them the opportunity of making their voices heard on election day. So the soldier-vote bill which is scheduled to come before the Senate today is entitled to unanimous approval by a much larger group of legislators than is likely to be present.

That bill is a patent compromise between military necessity and the principles of representative government. It leaves the polls closed to men in the service of their country in foreign lands and in American territories, where voting might reveal our strength to the enemy. But it makes special provision for the casting of ballots by several million men and women (the WAACS, Army and Navy nurses and similar groups are included) who would otherwise probably lose their suffrage this year. Safeguards against corruption are provided; in addition service men will have to meet the voting requirements of their respective States.

As modified by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, then, the bill appears to be a constructive piece of legislation. We are pleased to see Congress make special concessions to uphold the rights of young men from the States who are risking their lives for the national safety. And we cannot help wishing that Congress would manifest half as much concern for the rights of soldiers and civilians alike in the District of Columbia.

Plane For Plane

Lieutenant General Arnold's detailed report on air battles in which American military planes have participated serves at least two useful purposes. It stimulates confidence—justly so—in the overall combat performance of our planes. And it highlights the grim fact that American and Allied pilots who have been flying our military planes have, almost without exception, had to contend with numerical superiority on the part of the enemy. In spite of such superiority, according to General Arnold, American and Allied losses have consistently been less than those of the enemy. This, of course, is proof positive of the quality of our planes and of the men who fly them.

Most of the air actions cited by General Arnold have already been reported in the press, but repetition can be justified by the obvious official desire to give the public a comprehensive view of what our planes have accomplished and to indicate that the best of this or that model is superior to corresponding enemy models. Such assurance is doubtless well-founded and is certainly welcome as a harbinger of things to come. But we would do well, in spite of the report's prevailing optimism, to restrain our exuberance, at least for the time being. Ever since the war began, it has been said over and over that man for man, gun for gun, the Allies are superior to the enemy. But the fact is that the enemy has consistently invalidated this comforting assumption by bringing to bear overwhelming numerical superiority of men and materiel. That this has been as true in the air as on the ground is confirmed by the actions detailed in General Arnold's report.

How soon it will be possible for us to come to grips with the logistics of the war in the air is anybody's guess. The lack of planes in China, and, to a lesser extent, in Australia, is proverbial. Only last Saturday, moreover, Lieutenant General Eisenhower, the commander of American forces in the European theater, was quoted as saying that the only thing holding up full-scale American air operations there is the lack of planes and trained personnel. In the circumstances, it seems hardly necessary to emphasize that American qualitative superiority in the air cannot be a decisive factor in the war, without the acquisition of at least numerical equality. General Arnold's report said nothing of this, but almost every sortie he reviewed clearly implied it.

Clumsy Expedient

Government officials are said to be debating whether to lower ceiling prices on gasoline and raise them on fuel oil. By such means, it is argued, the oil companies would be encouraged to ship more fuel oil into the area, and gasoline consumption would be correspondingly reduced. In normal times price adjustments of this kind provide the mechanism for adjusting supplies to consumption needs. But we are not living in normal times. We are at war, living under a system of Government controls that prevent prices from responding to changing conditions of demand and supply. Furthermore, the amount of gas and oil shipped into this area is limited by a shortage of transportation facilities. Consequently the authorities are confronted by a problem of how best to utilize existing oil and gasoline transportation facilities with a view to meeting the needs of war industries and minimizing the hardships inflicted upon civilians by gas and fuel oil shortages. It is especially important to strike a balance between the rival demands for fuel oil and for gasoline. Under the conditions now confronting us, price manipulation provides an extremely crude, hit-or-miss method of dealing with shortages in these vital commodities.

High Incomes

Mr. Lindley suggests in "Wage Formula" that important as is the need for control of all elements entering into rising living costs—farm prices, price ceilings and stabilized wages—this can be but part of a greater program, if America is to increase to the utmost its war effort, pay for as much of the war costs from current earnings as is possible without endangering the welfare of its workers, and, at the same time, devise methods of siphoning off into savings and other desirable channels its enormous excess purchasing power, thus averting the menace of inflation.

Your own recent editorial "Family Savings" should allay, to a certain extent, our inflationary fears. To help tide us over the inevitable difficult transitional period necessary for the conversion of our industrial machinery from war to peacetime production, once we have won the war, Americans are setting aside, after covering modest living requirements, paying taxes and purchasing their quota of war bonds, the remaining small sums from war earnings. Many with incomes below $1500 are actually compelled to borrow to meet ordinary expenses. To such people, as well as to many compelled to live on modest fixed incomes, current talk of already cracking ceiling prices, estimated to put a further drain of another billion and a half on the consumer's purse, is a matter of deep concern.

The War Labor Board has wisely implied a higher "minimum" than that of $16 for a 40-hour work-week, established some years ago under the Federal Wage Hour Law under entirely different conditions. Surely all ethical individuals agree there can be no justification for substandard wages today, when the national income is so high. The WLB's attempt also to equalize working conditions so that men voluntarily refrain from shifting from job to job, thus impeding production, is another step in the right direction. Our workers seem to accept, as necessary, the stabilization of wages that bear a true relationship to actual living costs for they understand why prices should be controlled. Many are willingly doing without desirable goods which, for the first time, they would be in a position to enjoy, since such articles require strategic materials needed to win the war.

Taking all these things into consideration it is understandable why the people hope for the establishment of a limit on high incomes. Also it is expected that tax loopholes will be closed up and special privileges that clearly lessen the chances for raising badly needed revenues to cover war expenditures be eliminated, and all other possibilities of taxation fully explored before there is talk of sales taxes. Men and women who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows are natural believers in a tax program based on "ability to pay." They may not be as articulate in voicing their convictions before tax committees as are those who guard so tenderly their special privileges, and who can easily hire brilliant men to represent their interests, but plain men and women are apt to measure the individual's "equality of sacrifice" by what is left after the family has met its living costs, paid its taxes and purchased its free share of bonds.

Keen editorial comments and careful analyses by intelligent columnists are great aids to clear thinking on common problems. We cannot have too much of both.

Let's Quit Kidding

Preliminary reports of our "offensive" in the Solomon Islands are still coming in and, while there is yet paucity of detail, are we going to claim another "great victory" when more is in? Better leave that to the Axis. (But God bless our brave boys—whatever results their heroic efforts prove to be.)

However, the purpose of these lines is to inquire whether, in view of Pearl Harbor, Hongkong, Singapore, Tobruk, the situation in Russia and India, it isn't about time to quit "winning the war" in the press and radio.

I turned off my radio last night in the midst of a pollyannic broadcast of war news by a well-known commentator who, I have no reason to doubt, has intentions of the best, but who, I believe, mistakes the temper of the American people, when properly informed. What we need right now, as the writer sees the situation, is a theme song by Irving Berlin: "Wake Up, Ye Sons of Liberty, Before It Is too Late," or something like that.

What will the historian of the future, if any there be to write, say of this day and generation? "They quarreled about their taxes, about ration cards and, while business was definitely 'out,' politics and strikes were definitely 'in,' as per usual. They couldn't agree and cooperate, even on such matters as blackouts and air raid regulations."

In connection with the latter subject, perhaps a few well-placed bombs is what is needed. They might stir up the Paul Reverers and Patrick Henrys to ride and proclaim again that the enemy is at our door—yes, both doors—the Atlantic and the Pacific. But, perhaps, we haven't any Pauls and Patricks. Well, in that case, there isn't much worth saving, is there?

WILBUR H. CLOSE.
Washington, Aug. 13.

Congressional Foresight

From time to time your editorial policy has made strong (to make an understatement) attacks upon our Congress.

Should you not in all fairness give Congress all "honor" when such honor is due? I refer to the record made by our Congress in 1935 in suggesting a highway to Alaska, and the organization, in 1937, of a separate commission headed by Mr. Magnuson, M. C., of the State of Washington, to work for a good road to Alaska.

Why not an editorial praising our Congress for this foresightedness, and point out, therein, that the work of the congressional commission was opposed by the "military brass hats" and by our State Department?

I, too, have been discouraged and disheartened by the weakness of Congress. I refer to that "so-called" Congress of 1932 and following years—the rubber-stamp Congress that did nothing "on its own" and only legislated as it obeyed "it's master's voice." But no matter what justification you may have for some of your criticisms, I am certain you will agree that Congress can be praised for its record on the Alaska highway.

RUSSELL A. ROBINSON.

Window Weights

The President is quoted as having touched off a renewal of the statues-for-scrap-metal controversy. There is no doubt we should go "all out" to avenge Pearl Harbor and the rape of Europe. However, in order to get Mr. Nelson his 17 million tons of scrap iron for next year, I doubt that we need resort to the desperate measure suggested.

For statues represent either ideals, or the men and women who upheld them. From the Statue of Liberty, whether beautiful or merely colossal, to the figure of the silver-tongued idealist, William Jennings Bryan, in Potomac Park, they represent America. Would the instigator of this witch hunt for unacceptable art regard with composure the dismantling of his Pharaoh-like memorial at Hyde Park, or the melting up for scrap in the next war of the sky-touching image of him which the young Democrats are going to erect in the land of Shangri-la? Of course not. So let it be with all those memorials which help establish us as men, a little lower than the angels.

According to Macaulay, when brave Horatius unspake, he said he was willing to die for "the honour of his country and the temples of his gods." Those who die in our place today are dying for "life as we know it," for the preservation of our customs and ideals. Without these ways our life as a people is a hollow shell of existence, an empty husk. It is not sufficient to try to save the gods without saving their temples. The temples are "an outward and visible sign" of the inward and invisible ennobling ideals.

But, "getting down to brass tacks," as it were, or giving Mr. Nelson "the cold steel," so to speak, here is a warmed-over idea from 1917. Those window weights! They are luxuries, pure and simple, and have nothing to do with idealism or our way of life.

Most houses have sliding windows. Most windows have two sashes. Each sash uses two weights. An average weight weighs 8 pounds. This makes 32 pounds of luxurious cast iron in each window-frame. My house contains 16 such windows and conceals within its walls as window weights one-fourth ton of good, hard iron.

Use Private Storage Tanks

I have read with interest the article in The Washington Post of July 30 titled "Calls for Oil Swamp Dealers as Start of Ban Period Nears."

I cannot understand the attitude of the War Production Board or the Office of Petroleum Coordinator in restricting the sale and delivery of fuel oil for domestic use since this oil will not be burned during the summer months for heating purposes and would only be stored for use during the heating season. I have heard from various sources that many fuel oil dealers in the District of Columbia have their fuel oil storage tanks full and are unable to sell or deliver this oil due to the ban on sale of fuel oil.

There are thousands of residences in the District of Columbia in which oil heat is used and it is probable that relatively few of the storage tanks in these residences are full at the present date. Consequently there is a large reserve storage capacity available which may run as high as a million gallons or more. It seems to me the preferable procedure would be to deliver as much oil as possible during the summer or fall months in order to utilize the reserve storage available for domestic heating plants and thus relieve the commercial storage facilities.

Aleutian Legend

What an old Alaskan rover once told me about the Aleutian Islands, when I was not very far away from them, has apparently rested blissfully and unchallenged in my mind for all these long years. I was doubtless starry-eyed enough, when he was regaling me, avidly absorbent about anything a little bit fabulous; for here I was in Catalla, seven long stormy days by sea from Seattle, having my own first fling at roving.

The gold rush had been over for several years, and now it was the coal rush, and Catalla was springing up, hurriedly nailed together, to afford a railroad terminal at the broad mouth of the Bering River. Here ended a vast valley, walled on either side by high ranges which gave a funneled vista of lofty peaks a tremendous distance back in the bleak heart of things.

The Bering River, coming down from a great distance and a great height, arrived here at the sea with weight and momentum, and it had built up a strong, hidden bar at its mouth across which it thrust its constant tons of cold, glacial water in eternal defiance of the inrushing, warmer water of the sea. Ships could not cross here, to the broad, quiet waters behind, and had to lie outside, rolling with the shore-swells of the sea. Passengers for Catalla had to go over the ship's side, down a dangling Jacob's ladder, hoping to be picked off by the small craft which had come out from shore. As the ship rolled shoreward, the ladder would swing out from the leaning rail into wobbly space, with a lone voyager at its lower end; but it was not always possible, at the first try, for the small boat to maneuver itself underneath, and then the big ship would start its roll seaward, the ladder and its clinging, worried guest would come banging back against the ship's side, and the small boat would drift far away. Everyone would be lined up at the rail, watching, some awaiting their own perilous turn, and I saw a minister of the gospel lean out so far that his Bible slipped out of his coat pocket and fluttered into the sea.

Eventually, the transfer of passengers was successfully made, each of the small craft had its load, everyone was herded down into the small cabin, the hatch was secured from within and the course was set for the churning bar. No one could see out, the small portholes already banked by the foaming sea, and there was an increasing thump and thud of falling water upon the cabin's roof. It was roll and reel, then, with all of the small boat's gasping strength in play against the increasing odds, coughing gas through the crowded little cabin. We were climbing, now, climbing water, wrenched this way and that, and finally there came a strange, high feeling of pause and poise. The reeking engine raced for a moment, as though it were spinning in air, and then we tilted sharply downward, gliding upon easy water, still rolling a little from all that had been feverishly overcome. We were past the bar and everyone laughed a little foolishly, or flushed in sudden relief. The hatch was sprung open, letting in the good, familiar air, and dead ahead was the little mushroom landing of our goal—Catalla.

Here were all of the strangeness and newness which I had dreamily hoped to find, and coming down the mushy, main street of Catalla was one of the oddest little parades I had ever seen. At its head was an erect, Russian priest robed in black from head to foot, leading a thin, trailing line of Indian boys and girls toward the beach. The priest had a long, brown beard, well kept, and from under it hung a twisted silver chain with a silver cross. On his head was a tubular, high black hat, flat on top, and without a brim. He was leading his children very slowly, looking nowhere except straight ahead, and they walked with a strange, flat-footed gait which I had never seen before, like web-footed birds.

On all sides, new, yellow lumber had taken haphazard shape into buildings which stood high above the sand and tundra on stilts. Each of them had a platform across the front, with steps leading up, and where the buildings were not too far apart, the gaps between them were bridged. Saloons were everywhere, the warm, accepted meeting place for everyone, from all the four corners of the wanderer's world, and the places were still too new to have a beery smell—instead, there was the sharp sweetness of resin being drawn from the new boards by the fat, ruddy stove. Here were the old-timers, weather-beaten men and women who had been kicking around the North, from camp to camp, ever since the gold rush, and now they were at Catalla, filled with some sort of new hope. Principally, however, they were waiting around the stove for the newcomer who might enter and approach the bar. It was the custom of the house, it seemed, that the newcomer should set up the drinks, all around. The bartender would whack his ringed finger against the bar, there would be a noisy stir around the stove as chairs were pushed back, and every one would line up to join the surprised host in his first refreshment.

It was in one of these places that the old rover was to tell me about the Aleutian Islands. He had surely been everywhere in Alaska, and he told me first about the long, isolated winters in Nome, the thunderous breaking up of the Yukon's ice in late spring. He told me of the new rush for coal, and how it was only for those who were already rich, it cost so much to reach it and bring it out to tidewater. When he finally got around to the Aleutians, I was ready to believe anything that he might tell me.

"The Aleutian Islands," he said, "they come and go, you know. They aren't always there, all of them. They're all volcanic, tossed up from eruptions under the sea. They sit there a long time, undisturbed, but there always comes a time when there are other eruptions, down in the sea, and then an Aleutian or two—just the smaller ones, will sink and disappear, and a new one, perhaps, will come up somewhere else. That's the way it has always been with the Aleutians. They just come and go, come and go . . ."

Best-Kept Secret

By Ernest K. Lindley

Surprise In The Solomons

THE ATTACK on the Solomons Islands was probably the best-kept secret of the Pacific war since the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor. The preparations began more than two months ago, immediately after the Battle of Midway, which destroyed the Japanese superiority in fleet-going aircraft carriers and relieved the immediate threat to Hawaii and our Pacific Coast.

LINDLEY

One clue that our Navy was brewing an action somewhere may have been its display of indifference to the Japanese landings in the western Aleutians. This indifference was not altogether feigned: the reasons given for not risking a major effort to drive out the Japanese undoubtedly had some substance. But, for the layman, the Navy explained its indifference a bit too much and in too many different ways. Anyone who knew that some officers in the Navy strongly dissented from the official explanations would suspect that the Navy was getting ready either to throw the Japs out of the Aleutians or for an important operation elsewhere.

A week or two before the assault on the Solomons, at least a few suspicious and inquisitive Washington correspondents confirmed to their own satisfaction that the Navy would soon spring an action of some sort in the Pacific south of Hawaii. It was a natural assumption that this would be another hit and run attack on some Japanese outposts, rather than an invasion. But no hint of impending action of any sort were given through the press or over the radio, to the best of this column's knowledge. If any were, the correspondent should be given the benefit of the doubt—it should be assumed that he was guessing in the complete dark, not that he was making use of even the slenderest hint from an official quarter.

UP TO the very moment of the attack, dispatches from Australia were reporting the vexation of Australians at American neglect of the southwest Pacific. Some of these dispatches appeared under the dateline "General MacArthur's Headquarters." Almost certainly these were not intentionally misleading. For reputable American correspondents just returned from Australia testify to the feeling of Australian authorities and also to the state of mind of some of the American officers near General MacArthur. The Australians naturally clamor for all they can get. But the officers who profess to represent General MacArthur's views are doing him dubious service; their reports, as filtered through trained American correspondents, give the impression of a disappointed and frustrated man with no concept of global strategy.

Unintentionally, the dispatches from Australia and the reports of recently returned American correspondents may have helped to mask the preparations of the Navy to attack the Solomon Islands. Whatever General MacArthur knew about what was coming, he evidently kept the secret well.

A lot of military information leaks from Australia. But it may be that so much of this is incorrect that the enemy is further confounded. For four days last week during the battle of the Solomon Islands, dispatches from Australia and New Zealand were reporting details of the action which the Navy Department said it could not confirm. Some of those later proved to be wrong, while others probably were correct.

But, right or wrong, many of them were reported under the dateline "General MacArthur's Headquarters." At the end of the week, a spokesman for General MacArthur said most of these dispatches were conjecture. This may be admirable recognition of the freedom of the press. But it is a misuse of a dateline which implies that the correspondent is accurately informed. It is like marking a dispatch "Navy Department, Washington," or "Headquarters of the Chief of Staff, Washington," instead of merely "Washington."

THE NAVY Department's communiques, excepting perhaps the first one, were sketchier than they probably needed to be. Certainly more was known to high Navy officials about the actual course of operations—including facts with which the enemy must have been familiar and which might therefore have been made available at once to the American public. There were many indications that the Navy Department did not want to tell all it could for fear of arousing in the public an optimism which later developments would not warrant.

Admiral King is not noted for his judgments on public relations, over which, on at least one occasion, he tried to exert an influence beyond his prerogatives. While he is the top man in the Navy, we may expect reticence as to operations, at least while they are in progress—even though, in Captain Lovette, the Navy has a public relations head of exceptional intelligence who understands the curiosity of the American people and their right to have it satisfied up to the point that further information would aid the enemy. But we can put up with Admiral King's reticence or wiliness—whichever it may be—if the Navy continues to win victories. No one will object to remaining in ignorance, if the enemy also is befuddled or surprised, or if silence saves the life of a single sailor, marine or soldier.

Survey Shows How Germans Systematically Enslave Europe

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Hitler is conducting a two-point program to give Germany imperialistic economic control over Europe, the Foreign Policy Association charged yesterday.

According to a report prepared by Ernest S. Hediger, its economic expert, Hitler's two aims are:

1. "To maintain Germany's superior position as the main producer of highly industrialized goods and, more important still, its complete monopoly in the production of weapons so as to assure, in Hitler's words, domination over the rest of the world 'for the next thousand years.'

2. "To guarantee for Germany a constant source of profit by a monopoly over all transactions in foreign resources of raw materials, foodstuffs and even man power."

This program, the report points out, is not mere speculation, but is already being carried out in occupied Europe. The statement continues:

"Helpless populations of 'alien blood' have been exterminated, workers have been shuttled from one end of Europe to the other like cattle, whole industries competing with German plants have been eliminated or reorganized to work for the Nazis."

The association charges that so far as industry is concerned, "Nazi economists are apparently planning to concentrate all the heavy industry of Europe in two areas, both to be included in greater Germany. The first of these areas is in the Ruhr-Rhine basin, already the seat of Germany's most important iron and steel production, to which the rich industrial districts of Luxembourg, Belgium, Alsace-Lorraine and Northern France have been added.

"The second area is the coal, iron, steel and oil producing basin of upper Silesia, with the Olsa and Dombrowska territories, which were incorporated into greater Germany after the occupation of Poland."

One of the most effective methods to which the Nazis are resorting in reorganizing European economy, the report continues, "has been the establishment of far-reaching financial control over the conquered nations."

The Nazis exercise this control principally through two channels, the association reported, first by direct action inside the banks and the acquisition of shares in industrial, commercial and other corporations.

The report concludes by visioning grave economic dangers to the rest of the world if Germany should be able to defeat Russia and acquire her vast industrial capacities.

"Such a Nazi coup d'etat would serve as a prelude to the progressive economic isolation of the United States, destined, ultimately, to bring about this country's submission to totalitarian rule," the report said.

Through Axis Eyes

By Selden Menefee

As They See Us

IF YOU FEEL the need of a laugh, or if you think that the Axis propaganda machines are super-clever, it will do you good to know some of the things the Axis radios are saying to their own people and the people of occupied countries about the United States.

According to Tokyo, war gloom is general in the United States, and public opinion is turning increasingly against President Roosevelt. Tokyo gems include these:

"The recent U. S. edict against cuffs on trousers in war time shows the decay of American liberty, because it took away from the male the symbol of domination and the right of freedom."

"There has been a marked rise in U. S. traffic casualties from auto accidents. The increase this year is attributed to the panic that is aroused over frequent air raid alarms."

"The Metropolitan Opera is to close this fall. Observers in Tokyo commented that continued reversals in the current war have brought repercussions even among cultural phases of American life."

Nazis Call Americans Weak

The Nazis would have their people believe that Americans are weak, lethargic and disillusioned with the war. According to Berlin, "The defeats in East Asia have depressed the American public. Former propagandists for war now indulge in anti-war propaganda."

German domestic broadcasts bristle with items about America's lack of ships, gasoline, rubber, and strategic plans. The prize remark was, "America is losing the war because it has no motor cars."

On August 7, Goebbels' weekly article in Das Reich was devoted entirely to a blistering attack on "the spiritual and moral defects" of the American people. Passages from a German broadcast of the article were picked up in London and relayed to the United States by the B. B. C. Listening Post. Said Goebbels about America:

"The country possesses no language of its own, no culture of its own, no education of its own. Everything has been borrowed. If the Americans possessed no money, they would probably be the most despised people in the world. Arrogance is never so irritating as in their case."

Goebbels concluded by saying that he wouldn't wish to be buried in America. One London commentator added, "I don't think he need worry. There are plenty of people waiting to bury him much nearer home."

On the same day, Berlin gave the French a talk on New York in wartime, by a journalist called Manfred Zapp. You can get an idea of it from this passage: "The authorities dare not introduce a complete blackout for fear of a sudden increase of gangster crime in which New York, like Chicago, abounds. Many soldiers and seamen are seen in the streets—the latter mostly drunk. The hotels are booming with the many refugees from Europe—mostly Jews and aristocrats."

Inconsistency Marks Broadcasts

To the occupied countries, the United States is represented by the European Axis as containing "the most selfish people on earth, striving for world domination," but to listeners in Germany and Italy, the United States is portrayed not as a real menace, but rather as an unwieldy giant, large but slow, strong but stupid.

Rome has had a hard time finding commentators who know America. Persons who have visited this country only briefly or not at all take the microphone to decry unsanitary conditions prevailing in New York subways, or to tell how our Federal system of government results in the city people of Illinois going hungry while a surplus of wheat exists just over the boundary in Missouri.

According to Rome, the American press is extremely depressed. To create an aura of reliability for this claim, the Fascists quote such respectable sources as the New York Times to the effect that "it is necessary to prepare the country for hard moments ahead."

Rome also reports that "The precaution of the American Government in the abolishing of all foreign language newspapers has caused discontent among the foreign minorities because they were suddenly deprived of their papers."

The quotations cited above were all from Axis broadcasts directed to the Japanese, Germans, Italians or the people of occupied countries. Their obvious purpose is to convey the impression that America is weak, depressed and war weary, and that consequently American participation in the war will never be effective. This is an error which will eventually cause the Axis propagandists much embarrassment.

Industrialized Far-Eastern Russia

AS THE ATTENTION of the world is anxiously focused on the crucial struggle now raging in southern Russia, numerous reports emanating simultaneously from highly responsible sources forecast an imminent Japanese attack on the Soviet outposts in the Far East. Its coming would surprise neither the Russians nor the world at large. Bismarck's dictum that there are wars which "lie in the logic of history" is particularly applicable to Soviet-Japanese relations.

August, moreover, is climatically most suitable for warfare in the Far East; the Soviet-Japanese clashes, which have become for over a decade an almost annual ritual, have been timed for late July, August and September. It is noteworthy, too, that the anniversary of the formation of the OKDVA (the separate Far Eastern Red army) dates back to August 6, 1929. In its determination to invest this date with symbolic significance, the high command of the Far Eastern Soviet forces selected it as the day on which to inflict a crushing defeat on the Japanese troops, upon their invasion of Soviet territory at the end of July, 1938. Known throughout the Soviet land as the Battle of Lake Khassen, it was the most severe Soviet-Japanese clash since the Russo-Japanese war.

On August 9, 1938, three days after the humiliating rout, the Japanese Ambassador at Moscow asked for a peaceful settlement, which was arrived at on August 13, providing for a return to the status quo ante. The Soviet press hailed the victory over the "Japanese Samurai"—the Soviet designation for the Nipponese war lords—with fanfare and shoutings of joy. "Khassen has become a symbol of heroism, victory and daring," jubilantly proclaimed the Red Star. "'Beat the enemy in the manner of Lake Khassen' has become the people's slogan," echoed the Izvestiia. By order of the Supreme Soviet 6523 participants in the battles received various decorations and awards. A volume including the personal narratives of the participants, under the title, "How We Beat the Japanese Samurai," in which the emphasis is on daring, initiative and courage, was widely distributed. In subsequent years the Soviet press has devoted its issues of August 6 to commemorating that mighty victory. Soviet leadership shrewdly hoped to serve thereby the dual purpose of keeping alive in the minds of the masses the irrepressible Soviet-Japanese enmity and of stressing the might of Soviet arms.

Japan Covets Far-East Russia

Even as the Biblical writer knew that a "tiger does not change his spots," the Soviets never ascribed more than ephemeral value to Japanese commitments. They know that Matsuoko—that wily Oriental whom Secretary Hull described as "crooked as a basket full of fish hooks"—concluded the neutrality pact in Moscow on April 13, 1941, solely with the aim of neutralizing Russia while the military hatched their infernal designs upon the Western powers.

Soviet leaders have been aware for many years that their Far Eastern territories have long been on the time table of the Japanese military clique. Now that Russia has become an ally of Nippon's foes, the Japanese have excellent reason to fear that before very long the superb Far Eastern outposts of the Soviets will be placed at the disposal of the United Nations. Such an eventuality the Nipponese will unquestionably do everything in their power to prevent. If the past is any guide, this for next month should witness the all-out onslaught. In any event, the Soviets have not been lax in preparing for precisely such an attack.

Soviet preparations for the inevitable showdown with Japan began over a decade ago. Japanese seizure of Manchuria, in 1931, immeasurably extending the Russian-Japanese land frontier and bringing in its train the subsequent innumerable border "incidents," finally aroused the Soviets to the danger of its vast, totally undefended Asiatic domains. In Soviet memory there still rankled the Japanese occupation of Siberia during the civil war period, the abundant support given by the Japanese to the White interventionists, and the fact that northern Sakhalin was not evacuated by them until 1925. It could, further, hardly have escaped Soviet attention that the Japanese were converting Manchuria into an arsenal for the production of war materials, with a view to their ultimate employment against the Soviet Far Eastern territories. The Soviet leaders were thus faced with the dread and inexorable alternative of revolutionizing the entire economy of their Far Eastern possessions or facing the certain prospect of yielding them to an incomparably better equipped foe. The resolve to embark upon the simultaneous industrialization of both European and Asiatic Russia thus sprang from an identical motivation; namely, dread of attacks from West and East. Moreover, if the industrialization of European Russia presented a formidable task, that of industrializing the Far Eastern regions was infinitely more so.

Drawbacks Overcome

To assure a measure of success for these industrialization efforts several basic drawbacks had first to be overcome. These were, first, a scanty, backward, apathetic population; second, almost total economic and industrial insufficiency; and third, lack of suitable and adequate means of transportation.

Potentially Soviet Asia is plentifully endowed with all the blessings of nature. There is an abundance of oil, coal, ore and other essential minerals; its timber resources are the richest in the Soviet Union; it teems with mineral life, and the fame of its fisheries resounds throughout the world. The Soviet leadership faced the task of converting these potential riches into finished products. This they were determined to do irrespective of cost, both in terms of human life and money. In his outline of the Second Five-Year Plan, Molotov gave clear expression to this desire: "The Far East must produce all its requirements in full, and, so far as possible, metal, machinery, cement, lumber and building materials, as well as most of the bulk freight of light industries and food products."

After a decade of super-human effort the goals that have been originally set up, colossal as they were, have not only been achieved, but even surpassed. Industrial self-sufficiency has definitely been attained.

Population Augmented

By the dual and well-tried methods of suasion and force the population of the Far Eastern regions has been greatly augmented. A vast propaganda campaign sought to acquaint the Soviet peoples with the opportunities beckoning in the Far East. Urgent appeals were issued to the Komsomols (Communist Youth members) to proceed there and build a new Soviet civilization, and thousands responded to the call. The city Komsomolsk on the Amur, which in 1930 was a tiny fishing village and now harbors a poulation of 70,000, is a monument to the enterprising spirit of the young pioneers. Known as the Pittsburgh of the Far East, it is now the focal point of all heavy industry in that area.

Khabarovsk and Voroshilovsk, also industrial centers, have attained their present huge size during the past decade. Not content with voluntary immigration, Stalin ordered the deportation to the Far Eastern regions of the thousands of political prisoners, the dispossessed peasants known as "kulaks," the thousands of refugees from Nazi-occupied Poland, and more recently the evacuated German population from the Volga region. While the skilled laborers were harnessed into constructing factories, chemical plants and hydrological stations, the unskilled toilers were put to work clearing the wilderness, constructing roads, laying railroad tracks, building defenses. The census of 1939 showed a 33 per cent increase in the Far Eastern population since the preceding census of 1927. The population growth since 1939 has been even more spectacular.

Self-sufficiency in food products was a goal that seemed incapable of achievement, but it has been attained. Owing to the severe climatic conditions, grain could not be raised in abundance, and the population was compelled to subsist on hunted animals or, for the most part, on fish. Through a vast educational campaign and the use of chemical fertilizer the Soviets succeeded in raising new and abundant crops. To eliminate waste the farms have been organized in kolkhozes, as in European Russia. Fishing, one of the primary sources of wealth of the Soviet Far East and one greatly coveted by the Japanese, has been brought under government control to eliminate uneconomical methods. Large, modern canneries have been established at fishing centers, and special institutes provide technical guidance on all aspects of the fishing industry.

Transportation has similarly undergone a revolutionary transformation. Motor roads have been constructed connecting all points inaccessible by either water or railway. One motor road now under construction has Moscow as its contemplated termmus. The Trans-Siberian Railway has been double-tracked, but in view of its proximity to the Manchurian frontier, a new line has been constructed which is removed from that danger area. The so-called Amur-Baikal Magistral, largely completed, links the chief cities of the Far East with central and western Siberia.

The Soviet armed forces in the Far East are thus firmly based on a highly industrialized hinterland. The exact size of the Far Eastern Red army is, of course, a matter of conjecture, but it is generally estimated at between 700,000 and 800,000, distributed over a number of military districts. It is highly mechanized, and its air arm, kept in subterranean hangars, is strong. Owing to the length of the frontier, the Soviets have concentrated on small forts, loaded with all manner of explosives. Japanese scouts reported that Red soldiers were at work at 30 below zero "from morning till night in the construction of fortifications."

After the removal of Marshal Vassili Bliukher, the real creator of the Far Eastern Red army, the high command has apparently passed to his former assistant, Gen. Gregorii M. Stern, who distinguished himself in his operations against the Japanese during the clashes of 1938 and 1939.

Of supreme importance to the United Nations are the numerous outposts of the Soviets. Their strategic significance is at the present literally beyond all value. These are the Kamchatka Peninsula, which some American strategists urge should become the jumping-off ground for attacks upon Japan; northern Sakhalin, and the Commander, Karagin, and Bering or Behring islands. All of them are reported to have subterranean hangars for airplanes. The old harbors have in recent years been reconstructed, and extensive dock and repair facilities provided. The size of the Soviet fleet, as of the army, is difficult to determine. The Soviet Naval Commissar Kuznetsov admitted in 1939 that the Far Eastern fleet comprised 100 warships. Above all, there is Vladivostok—dominator of the East—scarcely 700 miles away from Tokyo, an eternal pistol aimed at Nippon's heart. In the hands of the United Nations these harbors and hangars would become the centers from which would proceed the deadliest tools aimed to hasten the eclipse of the Rising Sun. These outposts must, consequently, be held at all costs.

A mere decade ago had the Japanese war lords unloosed an all-out attack on the Soviet Far East their success would have been a foregone conclusion. In 1942 the situation is radically, unrecognizably changed. Behind the Far Eastern Red army and navy stand the endless resources of all Soviet Asia.

The heroic, free, hardened, self-reliant sons of the regenerated peoples of the Soviet Far East stand ready to meet the swarms of the dwarfish automatons.

Private Purkey

Dear Oscar:

Dad and I got your letter about your being switched to another hotel at Atlantic City and are glad you like it better than the other hotel where you were training. You are luckier than your brother Luther who has been in one of those Miami Beach hotels all summer but who says the heat is awful down there. But it is nice that you are both in modern hotels and I hope the service is better than the last hotel your dad and I visited at a summer resort.

We took a vacation and put up at a beach resort hotel last month and if what happened to us happens to our soldiers the war is lost, your father says.

We got poisoned by the food but came out all right because there was too little food per portion. The room we got was so small and hot that we nearly died every time we went into it. The screens were so full of holes that not only did horseflies get through but some of the horses, according to your pop. The room was full of everything that could fly. Your father says to tell you that he still thinks it was all a mistake and that instead of being a hotel we were in that Collyer home in New York.

The plumbing was out of order, the desk phone had been disconnected or something, the elevator ran only by appointment and even if you complained around noon that your breakfast hadn't been served yet the reply was always "We are working on that." The hotel was located next to some garage that had been changed into a factory for making guns and from the racket I guess they must have been testing them, too. Your father says to tell you that no matter what we ordered from the menu we always got the same three dishes, succotash, blueberry pie and green tomatoes.

So you can see why we are a little worried when we read of you being in a hotel.

How you could stand what we stood and be in any shape to fight is beyond me, my dear boy, no matter how much you felt like it. Dad says I should not worry as the hotels which Uncle Sam is putting the army in are the best in the country and that probably the army is making up the menu instead of the regular hotel managers and chefs.

He says that even if this is not so and some of the hotels are no better than the one we stopped in it will come out all right as there is no better way to toughen up an army than to make it stand for the accommodations in some hotels these days. He says if a soldier had to put up with what we did he would be material for a commando leader inside of a week.

Well, Oscar, I hope your hotel is not giving you any trouble and that you will come out all right, provided you do not have any holes in the screens like we did. We are recovering slowly from the vacation and will be back in good health in another few weeks. Pop sends his love and says not to eat too much corn on the cob and always remember that in summer resort hotels the bluefish is apt to be cod.

Take care of yourself and please tell the captain that I would appreciate it if he would see that you have a room with an ocean breeze.

All my love,
Mother.

On Impeding The War

By Mark Sullivan

A Presidential Attitude

AT A PRESS conference last week, newsmen asked President Roosevelt several questions about labor unions. The opening question involved stating some preliminary facts: On the Pacific Coast, there was an attempt last month by an Administration agency, the War Labor Board, to stabilize wages in the aircraft industry. To the meeting for this purpose came a representative of another Administration agency, Mr. Leon Henderson's office of Price Administration. His purpose was to see that there should not be such a wage increase as would make it difficult for Mr. Henderson to prevent rising prices of goods generally. This attitude of OPA irritated the labor leaders at the meeting. The meeting broke up. The impression since has been that the whole matter would wait until the President adopts a general wage policy.

SULLIVAN

All this, the newsmen recited briefly, and asked the President if he had any comment. He replied that he had not heard the story and would have to look into it.

The manner of the President's reply seemed to suggest that he was rather displeased by the question. In turn, this apparent attitude seemed to stir newsmen to ask further questions about labor relations. One was: "What would be your reaction to a union steward who told workers to produce less than a fair day's work?"

This question rather plainly nettled the President. He replied, with some heat, and also with some justice, that it was an "iffy" question—that is, a question not containing enough concrete facts to permit a concrete answer. There ensued a brief dialogue—the newsmen asserting that the incident had occurred, the President demanding to know where and when.

THERE WERE further questions. One was: Had the President heard of increasing "wild cat" strikes? The President wanted to know where and when. When the newsman cited a specific case, the President said he would have his secretary look up the circumstances. Another question asked: Would the President comment on an implication from a member of the War Labor Board that the laws dealing with treason should be used to stop some types of strikes? Again the President said he was unaware of the incident, and asked the newsman to get the exact facts and report them to him.

Throughout all this, Mr. Roosevelt had a manner of irritation. One at least of those present felt the newsmen asking the questions had been rebuked. This impression was borne out by the way the President ended the discussion. He said at considerable length, and with restrained heat, that some of the newspaper talk about strikes is due from orders of some newspapers. As the newsmen emerged from the conference, one of them remarked that Mr. Roosevelt seems "touchy" about questions concerning labor—"Mr. Roosevelt acts about such questions like President Harding might have acted about questions reflecting on the Republican Party."

That the President regards organized labor, especially C. I. O., as his personal political following, is a justified impression. It is held by persons completely sympathetic to his and to his attitude. It was put in words by one of his Cabinet, Attorney General Biddle, at a New Deal jubilization dinner last March 4, the ninth anniversary of Mr. Roosevelt's Presidency. As reported by The Washington Post, Mr. Biddle said: "It (the New Deal) is a political party tied up with the labor movement under an able political leader."

THIS ATTITUDE — Seriously and widely and justly attributed to the President, and even more to some close to him—is an impediment to the conduct of the war, in several grave respects. It is an impediment to national unity, for it troubles persons and groups not included among the beneficiaries of the President's attitude. They are made to feel that when they live up to an obligation to support the Administration during war time, advantage is taken of their loyalty for a domestic purpose with which they do not sympathize. Enlisting wholeheartedly to win the war, they concede to the President powers which are used for a domestic course they do not believe in.

The attitude attributed to Mr. Roosevelt causes a disturbed questioning about steps he takes. Inevitably, openly or tacitly, persons ask: Is this step meant simply and wholeheartedly to help win the war—or has it a collateral or primary purpose of furthering Mr. Roosevelt's domestic program, or the program of a group?

To the obligations that rest upon a President during time of war, obligations heavy and solemn, the fundamental one is that his course should carry conviction that he is leader of all the people, without favor for any group. There are ways by which the President could convey this conviction to the people.

President Quezon Attends Special Mass for Philippines

God's blessing on the Philippines, their people and their President, was asked at a special mass attended by President Manuel Quezon yesterday at St. Aloysius' Church, North Capitol and I Streets Northwest.

President Quezon, whose birthday, August 19, the occasion commemorated, was not feeling well, and was unable to attend a breakfast in his honor at the Willard Hotel after the 8 o'clock mass.

As President Quezon walked down the aisle of St. Aloysuius' with the Most Rev. John F. O'Hara, C. S. C., S. T. D. he could see on either side the faces of his people, who comprised about half the congregation Filipino altar boys led the procession, which included Mrs. Quezon, the President's children and members of the staff of the government here. Bishop O'Hara, who is military delegate of the Army and Navy ordinariate, was celebrant.

Urging an "alliance with God," Father Pacifico Ortiz, S. J., chaplain to the President, in his sermon related the story of the Good Samaritan, comparing the Philippines to the man who was stripped, robbed and left to die, until the Samaritan came along.

"We need prayer and faith if we would win the peace," he said. Calling the future of the war dark and gloomy, he stated, "Our leaders know and have told us, 'We can lose this war.'"

Assisting at the mass and a speaker at the breakfast, which was attended by about 150 people, was Father Pedro P. Verceles, chaplain to the Filipino Catholic Association, which sponsored the mass.

Three prominent educators from universities in Washington were among guest speakers in local pulpits yesterday.

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, suggested that " high brows and low brows unite in ousting middlebrows from their guidance of affairs." He spoke at a morning service at Mount Vernon Methodist Church.

"The major solution in human civilization to date will be when technics are joined to ethics under the discipline of a welfare economy," President Douglass said.

Defining a "middlebrow" as a "betwixt and betweener" who suits all life to his own conveniences, who wants a finger in every pie without proceeding within the periphery far enough to come under the discipline of an idea, President Douglass pointed out that we need to find a point where the soul can recover its bearings and breathe again.

New demands are placed upon the highbrows, who are those individuals who can proceed with single purpose under the discipline of an idea for the accomplishment of unselfish ends," Dr. Douglass said.

Another American University speaker yesterday was Dr. John Bentley, who was the guest at Petworth Methodist Church, Titling his address "Civilization at the Crossroads," he envisaged a gigantic commonwealth in which all men's good would be each man's care.

"If I be lifted up from the world I will draw all men unto myself," was the quotation from Jesus he chose for the beginning of his address.

"Was this the dream of a village carpenter building his castles in the air?" he went on. "To the contrary, these words offer the essence of a spiritual truth which is the index of a moral passion that seeks the reformation of our times.

"These words of Jesus offer the prospect of a universal creed, radiating from a sacrificial personality that will draw all humanity to a common center, constituting an ideal of government and a new way of life. If this spiritual value were realized the whole earth would be bound in a new kinship.

"To the militant imagination of the conqueror, the goal of 'new orders' has always been sought through the ruthles subjugation of war. From Alexander to Napoleon and on to the Nazi hordes endeavors have been made to weld the nations into one by the rude blows of battle. The conqueror has marched on his way until another mightietr than himself has thrust him from power.

"In sharp antithesis to every scheme of conquest and every method of social reformation stands the startling declaration of the Nazarene. It is the most tremendous declaration the world has ever heard. Christ claims to dominate the world, not by might, but by offering the expression of the selfless life—the life that gives itself away, that offers itself in human service.

"Nearly 16 centuries ago," Dr. Bentley continued, "the Emperor Julian, who had striven all his life to turn back the tide of Christianity in the Roman Empire, died, and dying said, 'Thou hast conquered, Galilean, yet still do I renounce thee;'

"Since then, the history of the Western World has been in large measure the story of that conquest and we have come to think of our civilization as a Christian civilization. We have wrought elaborate heirarchies, theologies, creeds, sects, ceremonials, liturgies and all the pomp and pageantry of worship.

"Have we not," asked the speaker, "embraced the trappings and wrappings of Christianity rather than its essence?

"Yet," he answered, "with all the imperfections of the Christian Church it has always been the leaven of our civilization, and the burning light when all about was dark. Under the new absolutism of fascism and naziism, Christianity, liberal culture, freedom, and democratic faith have no place. The Christian doctrine of the preciousness of human life, in all its forms—individual, social, political, is uprooted in this new tyranny."

Youth will carry the day and save what we hold most dear, Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of the university students and professor of European history at George Washington University told the congregation of Congress Street Methodist Church in Georgetown yesterday. His subject was "There is a Lad Here." He said in part:

"War calls for steel and gas and rubber. It demands ships, planes and tanks. But it first must have youth. The experience which age offers may be rejected in the heat of crisis. The caution of maturity may seem a dead weight. At the point of contact it is the vigor, the enthusiam, the elan of youth which carries the offensive.

"It is easy for those who have long left youth behind to expatiate on the advantages of age, with its sounder judgment and its ripened experience. Youth still remains the great dynamic.

"Who was the hero in this battle? Who in that? And the answered will often begin: There is a lad here——.

"The New Testament uses those words. A crowd, drawn by the Master's works, had followed him up into a mountain. When Christ asked one of his disciples where food could be had for this assembly, Andrew said to him: 'There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two fishes, but what are they among so many?' It was that lad's loaves and fishes in Jesus hands that fed the five thousand.

"Today the multitude still depend on the gifts of youth. But they are still gifts, transformed by master hands. Youthful minds disciplined by sound teaching, youthful characters shaped in noble homes, youthful spirits touched by the Master: All of these united and set in motion by youth itself will carry the day's offensive and save what we hold dearest."

A peace which shall be a principle of permanent reconciliation and not merely a policy of temoray reconciliation was called for by Dr. William S. Dando of Carlsbad, N. Mex., in the second of a series of three sermons at Georgetown Presbyterian Church yesterday. "We must work, pray and fight for that kind of a peace," he said.

"Every problem in the world is a character proposition and a friendship opportunity," said Dr. Dando. "The vast human calamities to which we have been recurrently liable are the result of our social manufacture—due to our lack of humanity-mindedness. The disastrous racial and caste cleavages are the result of superficial distinctions.

"Lord Kelvin said, 'There are no prblems; there are only lazy minds, for when you encounter a difficulty you are on the eve of a discovery.'"

Another "inevitable" was added to death and taxes by the Rev. Edwin H. Tuller, assistant minister of Calvary Baptist Church, in his morning sermon. He said:

"One thing in this life is sure, whether you like it or not, you have to live with yourself. Because this is so patently true, the wise thing, the absolutely necessary thing, for every man is to cultivate at all costs a self with which he can live in peace and happiness.

"You have to live with what you are. For some, this may be described as heaven; for others it is literally hell.

"For youth the important thing is a right beginning. For those who are burdened with the guilt of wrongdoing, the only avenue of happiness lies in confession and forgiveness, buttressed by the determination to have, from that time forward, 'clean hands and a pure heart.'"

"We are losing the battles, but faith calmly awaits the victory," the Rev. C. H. Frick said yesterday at Mount Rainier Christian Church.

"Faith that conquers fear, hate and selfishness, welcomes crises as opportunities. Ancient Israel made much of many of them. Christianity was born in a crisis, it weathered a terrible one under Roman rule and came up out of the catacombs to build a Christian civilization on the ruins of the Roman Empire. In Europe and China Christianity is on the march. Our churches are turning this vacation month into one for attack. Reveille sounds. Tomorrow opens the second front."

Three indications that God changes were brought out by Walter A. Graham, layman speaker at McKendree Methodist Church yesterday. "God loves," he said. "God still loves men even though they may and do hate one another and desert all that is fine and noble in life."

"God suffers," was his second point and he cited the God of the Negro in "Green Pastures." Thirdly, "God desires," Mr. Graham said. "God today still desires the best for all mankind, peace and worldwide brotherhood."

He concluded, "God only changes as mankind changes. Man, made in God's image, has continued to change, always upward, forward and better."

BREAKFAST GUESTS—The President of the Philippines, Manuel Quezon, attended a special mass at St. Aloysius Church yesterday commemorating his birthday. (He will be 64 years old August 19.) Not feeling well, he didn't go afterward to the breakfast at the Willard Hotel, but the Philippine government staff was well represented. Above (left to right) are Vice President Sergio Osmena, Mrs. Quezon, the Most Rev. John F. O'Hara, C. S. C., S. T. C., and the Philippine chief of staff, Msj. Gen. Basilio J. Valdes

'Putting First Things First . . .'

REAL FACT about the plans of dynamic Henry F. Kaiser, the miracle shipbuilder, is that at first he was given the green light on building cargo planes—with a great big IF attached.

That IF was—provided he could find the critical materials to build his flying freighters.

PEARSON

In other words, the brass hats gave their O. K. with their tongues in their cheeks. For they knew that with plants closing down all over the country for lack of steel and other materials, Kaiser, no matter what kind of a miracle man, would not have much chance.

They did not realize, however, whom they were up against. Kaiser immediately hired the best minerals expert he could find, Herbert G. Moulton, and began digging into the metals bottleneck. One of these is chrome, used for hardening steel, especially in such vital parts of an airplane as the propeller collar.

And Kaiser found that a ferro-silica furnace he was building on the West Coast, by changing its lining, could refine all the chrome he needed.

He also dug up figures showing that between the United States, Canada and Great Britain, the United Nations produce 90 per cent of the world's nickel or about 165,000 tons annually, while Germany and the Axis produce only about 13,000 tons.

So Kaiser, determined to carry out his plan of producing giant cargo planes, took two letters to William Batt, head of WPB's Materials Division. One letter showed how he planned to get chrome. The other letter pointed out that if Germany could scrape along on 13,000 tons of nickel a year, the United States should be able to find enough nickel out of 165,000 tons to make cargo planes.

Transportation Is All-Important

"IT'S A QUESTION of putting first things first," Kaiser told Batt and other WPB officials. "I figure that when we're fighting 8000 miles away, the very first thing we need is communications, in other words radio, to give orders to our troops.

"And the second thing we need, I figure, is to get supplies to them. Getting the supplies there is more important than anything except communications, first because they can't fight without supplies, second because there is no use making tanks and machine guns and then letting them rust in the United States for lack of transportation.

"So if you want to get the stuff over to the fighting front, you ought to be able to spare a little nickel for me to make engines for cargo planes."

Batt studied the letters, agreed that some means ought to be found to get materials for cargo planes. However, WPB officials still were reluctant to move, still seemed to think that Kaiser, though a good shipbuilder, never could build planes in the time he promised.

Finally, as they continued to stall, Kaiser sent Batt a telegram saying that he was paying experts $1000 a day out of his own pocket to study materials and other technical problems and he wanted an answer.

NOTE: Though a lot of details will have to be ironed out, it seems certain that Kaiser will set a record building cargo planes.

IT ESCAPED PUBLIC NOTICE, but the Navy has officially requested a New York court to impose a sentence of 20 years, the maximum, upon Gustav Beekman, keeper of a Brooklyn house of degradation in connection with which a certain United Senator Senator was mentioned.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley stated on the Senator floor that his colleague was not present at the house, and this issue was not involved in the Navy's request for the maximum sentence. The real reason, as explained by a naval officer before the court, was much more significant.

The house of degradation had been used for the purpose of obtaining important information from American sailors frequenting the place.

It is also known that immorality of this type has been prevalent among the Nazis and was the cause of one Hitler purge. Three Nazi agents were picked up at the Brooklyn home, two of them found to be former German officers. # Men Called 'Spoiled Children' in Survey

MEN are as great a barrier to progress in women's education as are women themselves, Robert G. Foster and Pauline Park Wilson of the Merrill-Palmer School, Detroit, assert in "Women After College," a report of a ten-year survey of the effectiveness of women's education published by the Columbia University Press.

Women graduates of 44 colleges and universities participated in the studies, the findings of which indicate that the "education of men should take into account their need to understand and live in a world with women and children."

"As far as facing life is concerned, it seems fair to say that men are less adaptable than women, less progressive and alert to newer ideas being incorporated into their regime, and that they expect their wives to make most of the adjustments which have to be made," the report says.

Spoiled Husbands

"One outstanding observation from studying the lives of women is the need for a different kind of education of men—not professional, but cultural and personal functional. They are often intolerant, naive, egocentric, spoiled children in their roles as husband and father. They are impatient irritable and intolerant.

"They not only are not open-minded to change but they resist every effort of their wives to improve different situations. Wives are continually seeking help on child care and training, sex adjustment, personal compatibility problems, and the like, while their efforts are resisted by their husbands."

Data gathered in the survey revealed two ways in which the education of men was at fault, the report says. "In the first place, the husbands of these women are still living with a cultural ideology of the past generation with reference to women's role and function in society. The women themselves, who have had to make some kind of adjustment to changing societal patterns and expectancies seem more aware of progress and change as it is affecting their lives than do their husbands.

Frustrated Wives

"Being forced to make alterations in their societal role, women, while frustrated and temporarily inadequate, are aware of change, of new demands, of increased opportunities and responsibilities.

"In the second place, the men of this group seem to have had little, if any, educational background which gave them a point of view and understanding of themselves, of women in general, of the cultural role of each sex, and of changes which are occurring and altering the old established order. Their ideas and attitudes about women are of the past century, even though their economic and technological ideas are modern and progressive."

Stock Up Linens on Long Term Basis

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

WE ARE being told that this war is going to be long. We read constantly about the shortage of materials. One of the things that Mrs. Housewife had better be doing while the August linen sales are in progress is to check over the household linens.

This year we need to give special thought to our needs. The catch-as-catch-can procedure of life is past. We all need to plan our buying on a long time basis. Many factors are influencing our shopping these days.

Scarcity Appears Sure

Cotton has always been a plentiful product in our country. It still is, but even with increased acreage and bumper crops there won't be an over-abundance of it. The looms and machinery used in weaving cotton "linens," have been turned for a great part toward other purposes in the war effort.

This is not intended as a warning that will excite homemakers to dash down to the stores and buy till their budgets creak. But it is a suggestion that the household linen supply should not be used down to the last "shred" before it is replenished.

Sheets and pillow cases are a must in any household. So are bath towels, hand towels, kitchen towels and that humble square called the washcloth. So check over your linen supply to see its condition. Are the sheets getting thin? Can they be mended with the handy tape that will iron them into good condition, or will they need to be replaced? Will your mattresses need new protective covers? Will you need blanket protectors?

Many Improvements

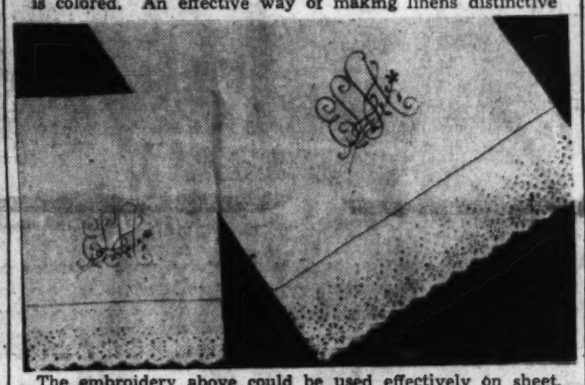
Modern improvements and innovations are constantly popping up in household linens. Today, you can buy sheets with embroidered eyelet hems—called petticoat sheets—with matching pillowslips; with woven-in-hems; with reinforced hems; with permanent protection tabs telling the size.

There are many novelty touches too to enhance linens—applique designs and monograms. If you have time on your hands, why not do some handwork and pretty your own household linens? The accompanying photographs will give you some suggestions as to the ways that linens may be enhanced with the needle and thread. The cross-stich has been revived recently as a decoration for linens. This form of decoration makes effective monograms as well as floral or conventional designs.

The petticoat influence is shown on the decorative edging of the sheet and pillow slip shown here. The entwined monogram could be embroidered in color if the petticoat edging is colored. An effective way of making linens distinctive



The embroidery above could be used effectively on sheet, pillow case or towel. The letter "S" has lent itself to a swan-like motif with background of water and water-lily. The Chinese influence is shown in the letters embroidered on the lower pillow case. Alphabets of many designs may be purchased at the pattern departments of local stores

Summer Is Easiest Time To Reduce the Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU thought you had just 30 days left in which to lose your excess weight or be stuck with it for life, nothing in the world could stop you from going on a diet today, beginning with your next meal.

Well, you have just about a month of this warm sultry weather left. During that time, it will be easy for you to tame your appetite and cut down on food. When the crisp tang of fall gets in the air, you will find it much harder.

Start today and you can lose 10 pounds by September 15. That may be only a fraction of the amount you need to lose, but the first 10 pounds is the hardest part. That much off will take you over the hump as far as your appetite goes. Also, you will look so much better you'll keep right on going until you are slim.

Retain Disposition

With the weather in your favor, you don't have to be very strict. All you have to do to lose is take most of your calories in the form of the protective foods, and eat those first. If you get the essentials of the nutrition yardstick, you don't miss the extras. And that puts you on better menus than you ordinarily follow. As a result, you don't lose your disposition, you don't go hungry, and you feel wonderful.

You don't have to "go on a diet" and give up everything you like. Of course, you like meat. Balanced menus allow for meat every day—two servings, if you like it that well. And you can have all the other good, substantial foods. Have bacon and eggs for breakfast whenever you like. Start with orange juice, have only one slice of toast sparsely buttered and take your coffee clear.

Luncheon Pattern

Now, what do you like for lunch? Ham and Swiss cheese on rye bread? Just omit the butter and mayonnaise and spread the bread with mustard. With your sandwich have sliced tomatoes and watercress and a little vinegar. And take a cup of hot tea, clear.

There you have two good meals. They will hold you over until dinner time. Then have a lamb chop. And how about some cubed carrots cooked with a bit of chopped mint? And a cooked green, any you like. With that meal have a generous serving of melon and a glass of milk.

But you don't think you lose on such meals? Oh, but you do! You delete the fats and carbohydrates that are lacking in the protective elements, and that takes a lot of calories you don't need out of your menus. Believe it or not, that is a good reducing diet. You will get your figure back on it—and quickly.

Budget Your Time for Grooming

To the career girl, the interval between quitting time at the office and the social date in the evening sometimes seems much too brief for all she would like to do to look her loveliest. A good thing to do is to work out a time budget which can be used on all date nights.

Putting her hair in order will probably be the thing that takes the most time. So the first thing to do when she gets home is to give it a good brushing and put in the curlers, or whatever she uses to set her hair. Ten minutes of this, and she can be ready for the one treatment that will dispel all sense of pressure and haste—a good sudsy all-over bath.

Slip a bath cap over the hair, and plunge into a warmish tub. Wash thoroughly, using a back brush on the shoulders and elbows. Give the face a thorough-going massage with a soapy wash cloth. Loll back in the tub while you count 60 very slowly—this is to get the full benefit of the soothing relaxation of the bath. Pull out the stopper, and while the water is draining, hop under the shower for a lukewarm rinse. Use a big clean towel for drying. Look at the clock, and you should find that your bath has taken no more than seven or eight minutes.

Another two minutes for applying an anti-perspirant and for washing a delicate toilet water over your body, and you'll be ready for the very speedy business of getting into your clothes. Any girl who doesn't manage that in five minutes is a slow-poke, or else hasn't kept her clothes in apple pie order.

Make-up and arranging her hair will take ten minutes. Thus, not over 35 minutes have elapsed altogether. When dinner is announced, or the time to go out has arrived, the career girl is ready. And she has the comfortable feeling that the young man she is to greet will find ready for him a dainty young woman whose tiredness went down the drain and who is ready, despite her busy day, for a lovely evening.

'Fascinators' Give Way to Turbans

Back in the Elegant Eighties they used to call them "fascinators"— those frivolous wisps that ladies threw over their hair or wound about their throats when walking out of an evening.

Today they are scarfs, and their name is legion. They're worn night and day, in town or country, with suits, slacks, evening gowns or what-have you.

Some girls like to wear them as turbans, others prefer them as neckwear. Some tie them around their waists, to add a dash of color to a plain dress or a rakish touch to slacks. And some have an unlimited supply and wear the mall three ways.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to let your eye-for-color be of practical use. Select 3 or 4 short remnants of as many colors but of same quality of material, to be made into one dress. Black, navy or brown for back. Beige or gray for sleeves. Two shades of blue or red or green, for front

Sunday Dinner's Leftover Becomes Flavorsome Croquettes and Patties

These are days when the cook hopes that some sleight-of-hand will produce some thrifty dishes for dinner. She can do a pretty turn with yesterday's lamb roast or the few scraps of chicken that were not eaten.

The remaining bits of the lamb roast can go toward making croquettes or lamb patties. Some diced celery, green pepper and onion combined with the lamb that is ground to make the croquettes, can be the pivotal dish of an appealing meal. If you want to make lamb pattie follow this recipe:

Lamb Patties

Mix the ground lamb with 1 teaspoon scraped onion, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, salt and pepper, 1 slightly beaten egg. Form into flat cakes. Saute in fat until browned. Add 4 tablespoons currant jelly and melt with fat in skillet. Cover and cook gently for 10 to 15 minutes.

The left-over chicken can be made into croquettes. Serve them with buttered peas, calavo-tomato salad, deep-dish apple pie and an iced beverage and the family will think it is Sunday all over again. The croquette recipe follows:

Chicken Croquettes

Mix 3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca with ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 teaspoon scraped onion and 1 cup milk. Place over heat and bring to a full boil, stirring constantly. Add 2 cups chopped chicken and mix. Chill. Shape, roll in bread or cracker crumbs or corn flakes, then dip in an egg that has been beaten with 2 tablespoons milk. Roll in crumbs again. Fry in deep fat, 390 degrees, for 1 to 2 minutes or until brown.

NO TELEPHONE—

But That's the Way the Ralph Bards Like It at Their Virginia Farm

By Carolyn Bell

It isn't because he can't get a telephone. After all the Assistant Secretary of the Navy would be classed as a big shot. It's simply that Ralph A. Bard and Mrs. Bard want to relax completely from their respective duties when they visit their farm Half-in at Clover, Va.—and so for 10 years have done without one of those "new-fangled" gadgets.

"If its important," says the obliging garage man at Clover, "I can deliver the message—but it is 10 miles out," he adds wistfully. Assured that it is unimportant, he hangs up.

A brief telephone call to the Bards' "modernized" home here on Forty-fourth Street reveals the fact that Mrs. Bard hopes to get away for a month-long vacation to Chicago, but before doing so there is some important business the hard-working lady has to wind up here.

A week from Tuesday she will be in town for the huge JANGO rally at which a man from the ill-fated Lexington will speak. This service organization is also in hopes of corralling a WAAC and a WAVE to speak at the all-star, pep meeting. Mrs. Robert Patterson, wife of the Undersecretary of War, who with Mrs. Bard acts as joint-head of the JANGOS, will cut her vacation short to be in town for the important occasion.

The Bards have recently moved from 2101 Connecticut Avenue to a house and stopping with them for the time being are their son-in-law and daughter, Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas J. Johnson.

They arrived here just a week ago from their home in Chicago "and have been moving ever since," laughed Mrs. Johnson. The Johnsons have been married just a little over a year and the lieutenant was only recently inducted into the Army Air Corps, so this is their first station. They expect to find a place of their own before many months are out and Mrs. Johnson is looking forward to doing some sort of war work "as soon as we get settled."

Elizabeth Dyer Weds in October

Mrs. Richard Clinton Dyer announces the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth Ann, to Lieut. Jeremiah C. Hege, United States Army Air Corps. Miss Dyer is the daughter of the late Richard Clinton Dyer. She attended Woodrow Wilson High School and Gunston Hall.

Lieutenant Hege is the son of Mrs. Hege and the late Edwin S. Hege and is a graduate of the University of Maryland in aeronautical engineering. He is a member of Tau Beta Pi, Phi Sigma Kappa, and Scabbard and Blade Fraternities. He is now stationed at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, where he is doing research work in aeronautical engineering.

The wedding will take place in the early fall. Both families reside in Chevy Chase.

Anne Morgan Flits In and Out of Town

In town for just a fleeting visit was Miss Anne Morgan who is still working night and day on her favorite job—French relief.

Although the efficient sister of J. P. Morgan was mum on the purpose of her quick trip to Washington she did have tea with the French Ambassador, Henri Haye while here.

As head of all the various committees for French relief, Miss Morgan, who spent many years of her life in France, keeps very busy in New York and elsewhere. One of her pet projects at the moment is sending of packages to the French prisoners of war in Germany.

Jokes and—True Stories

War time Washington must have its joke. Confusion reigns. One woman reports that she sends all her cleaning to New York because she gets it back faster . . . still another goes a bit farther and allows as how she sends all her work to Dallas, Tex., to be done . . . and of course there is the classic about the drugstore clerk who said "We are all out of everything for headaches, Sir."

And have you heard this one? About the War Department messenger who got lost in the Pentagon Building in Arlington and came out a lieutenant colonel.

Frances Perlo On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Max D. Perlo announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frances R. Perlo to Martin Gach, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Gach.

Lalla Harrison Will Marry On West Coast

Although she had hoped to have a big wedding in her "home town"—Washington—Miss Lalla Harrison, whose engagement to Capt. Clarence Dodge, jr., was recently announced by her mother, Mrs. B. Powell Harrison, will leave soon for the West Coast where her fiance is on duty. And there they will be married.

Miss Harrison and Mrs. Clarence Dodge recently returned from Lancaster, Pa., where Mrs. C. Howard Witmer was hostess at a tea in honor of the bride-elect.

ONCE MALTA—

Now Washington Is Meeting Place for Free French Captain and Britisher

Although they have shifted their scene of operations from bomb-gutted Malta to Washington, Capt. Jean George Gayral and Admiral Sir Andrew Cunningham will undoubtedly indulge in some close cooperation while on duty here for their respective countries.

Shortly before the French armistice, Captain Gayral served as liaison officer to the then British commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean, Sir Andrew, Cunningham, whose brilliant naval career is no secret, was recently made head of the British Admiralty staff here—while Gayral is the newly arrived naval attache of the Free French delegation. Sooner or later they all turn up in Washington!

The armistice found the French naval captain in Malta and it took him only a short while to decide to join up with the Free French forces. He was then sent to Portsmouth, England, and subsequently made commanding officer of the Free French fleet with headquarters in London. Capt. Gayral will not have to make the acquaintance of Washington's lease lend administrator—and bridegroom—Harry L. Hopkins, for he was introduced to the gentleman in Portsmouth by none other than the Prime Minister, Winston Churchill.

With his attractive wife—who is English by birth—Capt. Gayral arrived here a short time ago to assume his new duties and they have taken an apartment. He fought a number of naval engagements in the last war, mostly in the vicinity of the Black Sea. During the famous French mutiny in the Black Sea (when the crews hoisted the red flag) Capt. Gayral's ship, La Scarpe, was the only vessel that did not mutiny and he brought the ship successfully back to France.

He then saw service in China as well as in Indo China and in 1930 was made flag officer to the commander in chief at the French naval base, Cherbourg. During the early part of the recent war he was assistant chief of staff to the commander of the French naval forces in North Africa. And shortly after that was sent to the Mediterranean.

Ensign Maher, Lois McCann Are Married

Pequot Chapel in New London, Conn., was the scene of the wedding of Miss Lois Katheryne McCann, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Allen R. McCann of this city and Ensign David Balfour Maher yesterday at 1:30 o'clock. Ensign Maher, who is stationed in New London, is the son of Capt. and Mrs. James E. Maher of that city.

White gladioli adorned the altar and the bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Harvey A. Gallup. She wore an aquamarine silk gown and a corsage of orchids. Her sister, Miss Barbara F. McCann served as maid of honor wearing a beige lace gown and small blue feather hat. Her bouquet was of mixed flowers. Another sister, Miss Alyn Carolyn McCann, was gowned in pink silk with a pink hat and carried flowers.

Ensign John J. Noland served as best man for the bridegroom and the ushers were Ensign Charles Taylor and Lieut. (j. g.) Donald Scheau. A wedding breakfast followed for members of the bridal party. The couple will make their home in New London.

War Weddings Are Numerous Here; Margaret McKnight Becomes Bride

Eloise Smith Married to Lieut. Meckes

Wedding bells pealed and romance took the spotlight over the weekend as a record-breaking number of marriage ceremonies took place.

The Chapel of Mount Vernon Junior College Chapel was the scene of the wedding Saturday of Miss Margaret Della McKnight and Richard Titus Tiebout, who are now on their honeymoon and upon their return will live at 4801 Connecticut Avenue. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. J. Lee McKnight of this city and Hudson, Ohio, Mr. Tiebout is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius H. Tiebout of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Stony Brook, Long Island.

The Rev. Moses R. Lovell officiated at the 8:30 o'clock ceremoney and a reception followed at the Sulgrave Club. The bride was given in marriage by her brother Ensign Thomas C. McKnight. Miss Lenore Marie Pierce of Baltimore, Md., served as maid of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Nancy Anne Hanks and Miss Ann Hoyt Jones, both of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Barbara Willis Vickery of this city. Miss Winifred Ann Tiebout, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl.

The bride's gown was of the traditional Duchess satin and made with tight fitting bodice, sweetheart neck line and long tight fitting sleeves. She carried white orchids, white gardenias and white stephanotis.

The maid of honor wore a dress of pale green marquisette, made in the long torso effect, with sweetheart neck line, long sleeves and a very full skirt, and carried yellow roses, white stephanotis. The bridesmaids wore similar models in pale yellow marquisette and carried yellow roses, white roses and white stephanotis. The little flower girl was dressed in pale green marquisette.

Cornelius H. Tiebout, jr., served as best man for his brother and ushers were Ensign John Abberley, U. S. N. R., of Norfolk, Va.; John T. Arms 3d, of Riverside, N. Y.; Lieut. Charles A. Weed, U. S. A., of Fort Bragg, N. C., and James Gordon of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The bride attended Laurel School in Cleveland, Ohio, and Mount Vernon Junior College. Mr. Tiebout was graduated from Lehigh and Polytechnic Preparing School in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Short Honeymoon For Marine

With only a 24-hour honeymoon, Lieut and Mrs. Waldemar Meckes, jr., have gone to Quantico, Va., where he will report for duty in the Marine Corps. The marriage of the former Miss Eloise Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Werner G. Smith of Cleveland, Ohio, and Lieutenant Meckes took place on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock in St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Waldemar Meckes, also of Cleveland.

MRS. RICHARD TITUS TIEBOUT

Among those in attendance were the Norwegian Ambassador, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, and the Commercial Counselor of the Norwegian Embassy, Hans Bull, who are friends of the bride's family.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white marquisette and lace over white satin. Her white tulle veil fell from a halo, which was decorated with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Frances Smith served as her sister's maid of honor. The bridegroom's sister, Miss Patricia Meckes, and Miss Helen Gentsch, both of Cleveland, were bridesmaids. All were gowned in white and carried white gladiola blossoms and maidenhair fern.

Mr. John Meckes, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. The ushers were Lieut. Thomas Quintrell, United States Army; Lieut. Jack Zimmer, United States Marine Corps, and Cadet Peter Link, United States Army Meteorological Service.

A reception for about 100 guests took place in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel after the wedding.

Mrs. Meckes is a graduate of the Erskine School in Boston and finished her junior year at Smith College this spring. The bridegroom was graduated from Dartmouth College in June, and left two days after commencement to enter the Marine Corps.

Lieut. Buckley, Bride on Trip

Lieut. and Mrs. James B. Buckley, jr., are on a brief honeymoon following their wedding here on Saturday and will be at home at 35 Stonewalk Drive, Columbus, Ga. The bride is the former Miss Jane Ann Alvey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alvey of Arlington, Va. Lieutenant Buckley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Buckley, of Springfield, Mass.

The ceremony took place at 8:30 o'clock in the Fort Myer Chapel, with Chaplain Gracey officiating. Ferns, palms and white flowers adorned the church. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown with a sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and train. Her veil was held with a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of gardenias.

Soldier Boys Are 'Treat' To Work For

Up at 5:45 every morning to cook 28 breakfasts for as many hungry soldiers is not a sissy job—and Mrs. Prudence Maples knows it. Mrs. Maples, who hails from Florida, admits this is her first fling at work of this sort. She is helping to manage eight houses here filled with enlisted men who are going to radio school.

"We have 300 men in all," she said "and I don't really have much spare time." But the boys are so nice, according to Mrs. Maples, that one doesn't really mind doing things for them. "Its a privilege," she added.

She has been in Washington a little over a year and finds the atmosphere stimulating—but hectic. The houses, which she helps to manage, have been converted into dormitories with bunk arrangements in the bedrooms. "And the boys do their own ironing," she laughed.

Senators Won't Relax, Says Psychoanalyst

Telling a multimillionaire, who is serving here on the War Production Board, that he was an underpaid salesclerk is one of the few boners David Rice has made since he took up "thumb-nail" psychoanalyzing in Washington.

Mr. Rice, dapper young man who fixes you with a hypnotic eye at one of the swank local restaurants, has "told off" such well-known people as Lieut. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., Diva Rosa Ponselle, David Sarnoff and virtually every Senator in town.

Young Roosevelt has "no defense mechanism" according to Mr. Rice and is a superb diplomat. On the other hand Miss Ponselle is too supersensative for her own good. Senators refuse to forget their work while most of the successful businessmen, down here to help the war effort along, have the happy faculty of knowing how to enjoy a holiday. These are but a few pertinent observations of one Mr. Rice.

— Purely Personal —

Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, will return this week from Massachusetts, where she has been visiting for some time.

The Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom have returned from a visit to their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Sixten Wollmar on Shelter Island.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson will return shortly from their home on Huntington, Long Island, Highold, where they spent the weekend.

The governor of the Farm Credit Administration and Mrs. Albert Gain Black have closed their house on Chevy Chase Parkway and will shortly take up residence in Kansas City, Mo. At present with their son, Robert, they are spending a brief vacation in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Lieut. Comdr. Raymond T. Holden, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Molly Holden, has been stopping in New York at the Waldorf Astoria.

Capt. Francis W. Haskell and Mrs. Haskell of McLean, Va. announce the birth of a son, Robert Finch, on July 29 at Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Haskell, the former Miss Mary Nouelle Delafield Finch, is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Edward Ridley Finch of New York. Captain Haskell is now stationed at West Point.

Mrs. William Nesbit Vincent and her children, Nellie and Bruce, are spending a few weeks in Coldwater, Mich. The Rev. Vincent, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church of this city, spent a brief period in Coldwater but has returned to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. James C. Wilkes and James, jr., are staying at Bigwin Inn, Lake of Bays in Canada for several weeks.

Mrs. H. L. Grunewald, accompanied by her daughters, Erma and Christina, are stopping at the Essex and Sussex Hotel in Spring Lake, N. J.

Mrs. Sophocles Papas with her small son, Theodore and daughter Betty, are spending the month of August at Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Samuel Revness of Westport, Conn., is visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice D. Rosenberg, jr., at their country home near Fairfax, Va.

Miss Marjorie Mandle of New York is the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Herbert Guggenheim at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barton are stopping at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City for several days.

Mr. Wilson Weds Grace MacDougall

The bridegroom has returned to his post at Camp Chaffee and the bride will remain in Washington for the duration of the war. At a quiet wedding Miss Grace E. MacDougall was married on August 4 to Kenneth L. Wilson of Camp Chaffee, Ark.

The Rev. J. Wesley Loftis of Silver Spring, Md., officiated with Miss Doris Brown of Lanham, Md., and Richard Baney of Riverdale, Md., as their attendants.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Aldrich of Takoma Park, Md.

Grace Hemelt Married Here

Corpl. and Mrs. William Clifton Clark, jr. are on a brief wedding trip in the North after which the bridegroom will report to his post at Camp Lee, Va. The marriage of the former Miss Grace Cecile Hemelt, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Francis J. Hemelt, took place on Saturday morning at St. Gabriel's Church. Corporal Clark is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Clark.

The nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Theodore M. Hemelt, S. S., the bride's uncle and she was given in marriage by her father, who is president of the District of Columbia Chapter, Phi Beta Kappa. Present in the sanctuary were the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore; Rev. William J. Sweeney, of St. Gabriel's and Rev. Dr. William Russell of Catholic University.

The bride wore a period gown of embroidered white taffets with long, tight sleeves ending in points over her hands with full sheered puffs. The bodice was form fitting with full circular train. She carried her first communion prayer book decorated with orchids and ribbon.

She was attended by her sister, Miss Lenore Hemelt who wore a two-toned taffeta grown with a fitted purple waist and full wistaria skirt. She carried an arm bouquet of picardy gladioli.

The best man was the bridegroom's brother-in-law, Ralph Egan and ushers were John A. Singerhoff and Charles Hemelt of Baltimore.

The bride's mother was attired in a street length black sheer frock trimmed with sequins and a large black hat. She wore a corsage of rubrum lilies. The mother of the bridegroom wore a navy blue sheer with accents of white and a gardenia corsage.

Following the wedding mass a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Joyce Cook Engaged to William Haden

Mrs. Cook Clark of Ithaca, N. Y., announces the engagement of her daughter, Joyce Cook, to William Dandridge Haden, jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. William Dandridge Haden, of Charlottesville, Va. Dr. Haden is Mayor of Charlottesville.

Miss Clark is a graduate of the University of Illinois, where she was a member of Alpha Phi Sorority. For the past year she has been doing graduate work in medical technology at the University of Virginia Hospital.

Mr. Haden was graduated from Georgetown Preparatory School and the University of Virginia. He is now attending the medical school of the University of Virginia. He is a member of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity and Nu Sigma Nu Medical Fraternity.

The wedding will take place in September.

Entertains Opera

Mrs. Mary Louise Norman, who makes her home on Brookeville Road in Chevy Chase, Md., was hostess at a dinner party last night when guests included a number of the cast of the San Carlo Opera Company.

ATTENTION—

Officers for Riley Moore and Ella Harlee Are Making Plans

One is blond. One is brunette. They got their heads together and decided that officers—as well as enlisted men—need entertaining.

Riley Moore, a vivacious young lady with snapping dark eyes, who was named for her father, Dr. Riley Moore, and Ella Harllee have thought up a plan for getting the officers in town and the many young college girls here together. On Saturday the A. A. U. W. (the younger-set branch, that is) will give a dance at the clubhouse on I street from 9 until 12 o'clock.

When not thinking up such ideas Miss Moore is a terrifically busy member of the Navy Public Relations—magazine section. Writing articles, speeches and helping to keep a complicated clipping file seem to be her main duties. She received her education at Goucher College and at the Sorbonne.

Miss Harllee doesn't seem to be lacking in ideas or energy either. She is the daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William C. Harlee and it was General Harllee, now retired, who was in command of the occupation of Haiti by the Marines. Ella has a speeech class, but at the moment is busier with her plan to put over a Portuguese radio program. This, however, is still in the embryo stage. Having gone to school in Brazil, this service daughter speaks Portuguese and is in hopes she can further our Good Neighbor policy by broadcasting to the people of Rio in their native tongue.

Invitations have been sent out by these two, who are organizing the event, to the "recent graduates" of the A. A. U. W. for the dance on Saturday. This group, organized this summer by A. A. U. W., includes members five years or less out of college. They are hoping to supplement the many dances for service men being given by other groups in the city by entertaining the officers once a month.

Miss Hemingway, Lieut. Suddath Marry Wednesday

An engagement of wide interest throughout the South and in Missouri that has just been announced is that of Miss Vernon Hicks Nelson Hemingway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Samuel Hemingway, of Greenwood and Jackson, Miss., to Lieut. William Edward Suddath of Fort Bragg, N. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Suddath of Warrensburg, Mo., and grandson of Capt. and Mrs. William Naylor McDonald of Berryville, Va. Lieutenant Suddath is a graduate of the University of Missouri and received his LL.D. degree from the University of Virginia, class of 1940, and until he entered the United States Army this spring he was with the firm of Watkins & Eager, attorneys, Jackson, Miss.

Miss Hemingway is a graduate of the Jackson (Miss.) High School, a granddaughter of the late James Ashley Hemingway, United States attorney for the Territory of New Mexico under President Grover Cleveland, and her great-grandfather, United States Senator from Mississippi, James Zackariah George, was the author of the Constitution of Mississippi and was chosen to represent his State in the National Hall of Fame at the same time President of the Confederacy Jefferson Davis was selected as the two most prominent men of their State.

Lieutenant Suddath is a descendant of Col. Angus McDonald of Winchester, Va., also of Col. Charles Simms, a member of General Washington's staff and a charter member of the Society of the Cincinnati. They will be married Wednesday quietly in Atlanta, Ga., owing to the short leave of the bridegroom-elect. The dean of the cathedral, the Rev. Raimundo de Ovies, will perform the ceremony

Henry Dumont Dies; Private Funeral Today

Henry Dumont, 64, prominent in art and advertising circles in Washington and in San Francisco, died at 11 a. m. yesterday at his home, 1421 Masachusetts Avenue Northwest, after a two months illness.

Private funeral services will be at 4 p. m. today in Hysong's funeral chapel, 1300 N Street Northwest under the direction of the Rev. Fred S. Buschmeyer of All Soul's Unitarian Church.

Mr. Dumont was born in San Francisco the son of Frederick Dumont of Guernsey, Channel Islands, England, and Jane Dougal of Renfrew, Scotland. He received his early education in the public schools of his birthplace, and later attended business schools in Chicago and New York. He went to the Pacific Coast in 1931 to engage in his own advertising business. While in San Francisco he served as president of the San Francisco club in 1935 and 1936.

He came to the District of Columbia in 1937 and founded the Washington Intelligence Bureau and was active in its affairs until his death.

Mr. Dumont also organized the Business Men's Art Clubs of New York and San Francisco, and was first secretary, and first secretary-treasurer of the Organization Committee of the Audit Bureau of Circulation. He was a member of the Board of Trade of the District of Columbia.

His achievement included poetry and art. He was the author in 1910 of "A Golden Fancy and Other Poems," and in 1920 of "A History of Company F," based on his experiences as a member of the Home Guard of the Illinois National Guard during the first World War. At that time, his unit, stationed in La Grange, Ill., was called to Chicago to assist in quelling race riots.

Mr. Dumont also contributed frequently to Poetry, Poetry World, Overland Monthly and the Step Ladder, and other magazines devoted to art and poetry.

Mr. Dumont leaves his wife, Mrs. Nina Webster Dumont, two children by his first wife, John Keats Dumont of New York, and Martha Jane Dumont of Philaelphia, and a brother and sister, John and Margaret of Alameda, Calif.

Camden, Former Kentucky Senator, Dies at His Home

Paris, Ky., Aug. 16 (AP).—Former United States Senator Johnson Newlon Camden, 77, for many years a leader in thoroughbred racing, agriculture, mining and political affairs in Kentucky, died today at his home, Runnymeade Farm, near here.

Camden, a native of West Virginia, entered Kentucky political life in 1911 and was apointed to the Senate in 1914 by Gov. James B. McCreary after the death of Senator W. O. Bradley. A few months later he was elected to complete the unexpired term ending in 1917. His father, the late Johnson N. Camden, sr., had served two terms as a United States Senator from West Virginia.

Camden was one of the advocates of the bill establishing the Kentucky State racing commission and served many years as a member of the commission, three times as its chairman.

F. E. Ellin, Veteran Of '98, Succumbs

Ferdinand S. Ellin, 68, Spanish-American war veteran, died yesterday at his home in Wheaton, Md., after a week's illness.

Born in Chillum, Md., Mr. Ellin moved to Montgomery County about a year ago from Hyattsville where he had lived for 20 years. He had been in the wholesale and retail farm produce business for 25 years. For the past year he had been farming on the property of his son-in-law, John Parater of Wheaton.

Surviving are his wife, Lottie, a daughter, Mrs. Gwendolyn Parater of Wheaton, a brother, Benjamin Ellin, of Fairland, Md., and two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Whitcomb, and Mrs. May Jaquette, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m. at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Funeral Services For Mrs. Susie Link

Funeral services for Mrs. Susie R. Link, 74, who died Saturday at her home, 4160 Forty-ninth Street, Capitol Heights, Md., will be held at her home at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow and at the Capitol Heights First Baptist Church at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Link, who died after a three-week illness, was active in the First Baptist Church for the past 30 years and for many years was Sunday school superintendent there. Her husband, Mr. Frank J. Link, died in 1933.

Surviving are her daughter, Miss Teresa Link, and a son, Edward Link, of Capitol Heights.

Pay for War as We Go, Economist Urges

in operation. Only 39 per cent of Federal expenditures were paid from revenue in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1942. Even if the Treasury's proposals for additional revenue are met, Government income will only constitute 32.7 per cent of estimated Government outgo in the current fiscal year.

This is bad financing for two reasons. First, a heritage of debt will be left to the American people which, at best, will constitute an enormous and continuing burden on enterprise. At worst, it will result in inflation, repudiation, or both. In the second place, our tax program is such that it will almost force distortion and inequity upon our domestic economy. Secretary of Commerce Jones has announced that the "inflation gap" is in the neighborhood of 30 billion dollars. Independant students closely support the estimate of Secretary Jones. This means that our citizens will have 30 billion dollars more in the form of wages, interest and profits than will be needed to purchase at current prices all of the goods and services which will be available for civilian consumption.

Here is a serious situation and one which a well devised tax program can go far in rectifying. Again, the advantages are two: First, any part of this dangerous 30 billion dollar fund, with which there is nothing to buy, that can be taken as taxes will proportionately reduce the expansion of the public debt. If all of it were taken, there would be very little increase in the public debt. Second, to the extent that taxes drain away this 30 billion dollar monster, to that extent will the pressure be relieved on the upward trend in commodity prices. Thus it is possible to pay for the war as we go and to avoid inflation by the single process of absorbing national income in excess of the available amount of goods and services which can be bought at going prices.

Indequate Proposals

Treasury proposals for raising additional taxes are both inadequate and ill-designed. They are inadequate in that they make no pretense at putting the United States on a pay-as-you-go basis. Even if the Treasury's maximum proposals were adopted, total revenues flowing into the Federal Treasury would only finance about 30 per cent of war expenditures. Borrowing would have to cover 70 per cent of expenditures, and the debt would increase by an estimated 49 billin dollars. Countries with far smaller tax-paying ability than the United States are levying taxes which pay a substantially larger percentage of war expenses.

No proposals yet made by the Treasury even closely approach the sums which not only could be raised, but should be raised, from taxes. Various tests of public opinion show that the American people are far ahead of both the Treasury and Congress in their willingness to pay for the war burden as the war proceeds.

As to the specific sources for additional taxes, as proposed by the Treasury, and even as enacted by the House of Representatives, no more favorable comment can be made. Practically all of the proposals for additional taxes are concentrated upon corporations and upon those income groups which are already subject to Federal levies. While corporations constitute a a ready source of income, and while sound public policy does not permit of corporate profiteering in time of war, a few other considerations in connection with increased corporate taxes must be examined.

Corporations do not purchase goods and services for consumption, but only for productive purposes. Therefore, increased taxes on corporations have no effect toward preventing inflation. Because of greatly expanded business in connection with the war effort, most corporations must carry inventories and receivables far in excess of normal This puts a strain on working capital, particularly on cash, and many first-line corporations are having to contract bank loans. Thus strong corporate structures are not being preserved.

Finally, if a postwar depression is to be avoided, we must look to sustained production on the part of our great corporate enterprises. Conversion to peacetime production will be expensive, and corporations should be permitted to accumulate reserves so that employment may be as continuous as possible. Yet tax proposals of the Treasury run counter to each of these three principles.

Much has been said about extension of the income tax base. But little or nothing has been said about the fact that, of the additional $1,100,000,000 which the Treasury proposes to raise from income taxes only $100,000,000 will be contributed by the new income tax payers. All of the rest, or 91 per cent, will be loaded on the comparatively small number of persons who already pay income taxes.

Vast Sum Almost Untouched

By and large, the great increase in national income will occur in wage payments to workers and in the income received by farmers. Such increases for the first four months of this year over the similar period last year have amounted to 28 per cent and 17 per cent, respectively. Projecting these percentage increases over the full year indicates a $17,000,000,000 increase for labor and a $2,000,000,000 increase for the farmers. Here is found much of the $30,000,000,000 described by Secretary Jones as the "inflationary gap." Yet this vast sum of $19,000,000,000 is almost untouched by tax proposals of the Treasury and by the tax bill actually voted by the House.

Only two effective methods of attacking the problem of paying for the war as we go have been suggested. One is a sales tax, with no exemptions, of sufficient magnitude to absorb a major proportion of payments being made to war workers, without a corresponding supply of goods and services which are available for purchase. The second method is a withholding tax. This means that each individual would have a certain portion of his income, say 10 per cent, withheld at the source of payment and transferred to the United States Treasury. In addition, all citizens would be subject to other taxes which are now on the statute books.

It is no more patriotic for an individual than for a corporation to make money out of the war. Each should be prevented. At present the record is perfectly clear that war workers and farmers are benefiting enormously, both at the expense of the Treasury and to the disadvantage of other elements of the population. An adequate system of taxation should eliminate such abuses, and the best means of accomplishing this result would be the prompt enactment of a general sales tax, a withholding tax, or both.

Negro Named Congressional Library Fellow

Dr. E. Franklin Frazier, head of the department of sociology at Howard University, has been appointed a resident fellow of the Library of Congress, Archibald MacLeish, librarian, announoed yesterday.

Doctor Frazier is the first Negro to be appointed to the consultant services of the library. Widely known for his investigations into the sociology of the American Negro, Dr. Frazier, the library officials observed, is distinguished as an educator and author. He received his doctorate at the University of Chicago in 1931 after earning his B.A. degree cum laude at Howard Universiiy in 1916 and his M.A. at Clark University in 1920.

He was director of the Atlanta School of Social Work from 1922-1927 and professor of sociology at Fisk University from 1929-1934, coming then to Howard University.

In his capacity at the library, Dr. Frazier will prepare qualitative bibliographies in his field, will analyze the library's collections, make recommendations for purchases and aid in the handling of difficult reference problems concerning the American Negro, it was announced.

Mead's Friends Welcome ALP Ticket in N. Y.

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 16.—Decision of the American Labor Party to enter its own slate in the New York State election was greeted with pleasure tonight in the camp of United States Senator James M. Mead, President Roosevelt's choice for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination at next week's Democratic State convention in Brooklyn.

The right wing of the A. L. P., which controls the party, agreed at a meeting yesterday to enter an independent ticket in the November elections in the event that Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., wins the Democratic nomination for Governor. The A. L. P. ticket would be headed by New York City Comptroller Joseph D. McGoldrick as the labor group's candidate for Governor.

Terence J. McManus, Mead campaign chairman, declared that in view of the A. L. P. decision it would be "suicidal" for convention delegates "not to insist that their leaders release them from any previous commitments to Attorney General Bennett."

Tammany to Conduct Test Vote Today

New York, Aug. 16.—The first test vote involving a major delegation to the Democratic State Convention will come tomorrow afternoon when the Tammany Executive Committee meets to approve or reject a resolution indorsing the candidacy of Senator James M. Mead for the gubernatorial nomination.

This vote will not only be a curtain-raiser to the convention itself, which meets in Brooklyn Wednesday, but also is expected to have considerable impact upon a conference of State Democratic leaders which has been called by James A. Farley, chairman of the State Democratic Committee and backer of Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., for Tuesday night at the Hotel Biltmore.

New Agency Will Get Scrap To Steel Mills

(Washington Bureau of the Chicago Sun)

A new corporation, War Materials, Inc., is being formed to help the Government meet the heavy requirements of consuming steel mills, Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce, announced yesterday.

The corporation is being organized at the behest of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Along the lines of the Copper Recovery Corporation and the Steel Recovery Corporation.

Operating as an agent for Metals Reserve Co., a RFC subsidiary, War Materials, Inc., will purchase and sell to the mills a minimum of five million tons of iron and steel scrap.

The corporation will acquire obsolete structures and other scrap and move it to the markets, in cases where the total cost of such scrap, due to dismantlement, freight and other costs, would exceed Office of Price Administration ceiling prices.

Personnel of the board of directors will be announced soon, Jones said.

Army Forming Canine Corps For Active Service Duties

A "Canine Corps" of dogs for military service will be started soon at the Quartermaster Remount Depot in Front Royal, Va., affording the Army a well-trained and ferocious new striking element, it was announced yesterday by the War Department.

The program, with Dogs for Defense, Inc., a private group, as the recruit procuring agency, will start when kennels at Front Royal have been completed. The dogs will be lent to the Army through the procurement organization, located at 22 East Sixtieth Street, New York City. Survivors—there will be no swivel chair duty for any—will be returned to owners after the war.

One of the dogs' more dangerous duties will be to attack enemy parachute troops. They will serve also as sentries, messengers and pack beasts. To be accepted for Army training by Dogs for Defense, Inc., the applying canine must be fairly large, in good health, from one to five years old and have a fearless disposition. Gun-shy dogs needn't apply.

Either sex is acceptable if the animal can pass the physical and personality examination.

Desired for sentries and messengers are: doberman pinscher, airedale, boxer, collie, retriever, German shepherd, great dane, bulldog and French poodle; for sledge duty, malemute and Siberian husky; for pack duty, Newfoundland, St. Bernard and Great Pyrnees. Temperament and ability to learn, however, are more important than breed.

Soldiers will train the "Canine Corps." A preview of the intensive course was given, as follows:

Taught obedience to his commander, the dog warns of the presence of a stranger by a low growl just loud enough for his handler to hear. Through signals the dogs can then be instructed to lead to the spot, to attack the suspect, or to give chase if he tries to get away.

Just by KEEPING WELL
You can help win this war!

SICKNESS ON THE HOME-FRONT could lose this war. Sickness on the home-front stops men from getting to their jobs—stops planes and tanks and ships from getting to our fliers and our soldiers and our sailors.

We are facing a "doctor shortage," too. Nearly one-third of our doctors and nurses are going to war by the end of 1942. The two-thirds who are staying to care for the home-front are already busy. It's up to us to do everything we can to save their time by keeping well.

It's EASY to keep well

If you will just follow the few simple rules given here you can be well much more of the time. It's easy—and it will help win the war.

Listen to Donald M. Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board:

"Sickness that keeps a war worker away from his job is a serious handicap to production. We certainly can not afford to have production cut down by any avoidable illnesses. It's the patriotic duty of the war worker to keep well so that tanks, planes, ships and guns may continue to go to our fighting men in a steady stream."

NOTE TO WORKERS: "Year in, year out, influenza causes workers to lose more time from their jobs than any other disease," says the U.S. Public Health Service in an interesting booklet on how to avoid and treat colds and flu. Send 5¢ to Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C. Ask for Workers Health Series No. 1.

FOLLOW THESE 5 RULES

Memorize these five keys to good health. Follow them carefully—for your own welfare and for victory.

1. Eat right

Milk, butter, eggs, fish, meat, cheese, beans and peas, fruit, green leafy vegetables and the yellow ones, whole-grain or enriched cereals and bread—these are the key foods. Eat plenty of them. And eat 3 meals a day!

2. Get your rest

Regularity counts most. You can't catch up on lost sleep or missed relaxation! Try to keep on a regular schedule every day. Take it easy for a little while after lunch and dinner. Go to bed on time, get up on time.

3. See your doctor once a year

You have your car checked and serviced every thousand miles. Do as much for your body. Physicians can prevent many diseases and illnesses for both children and grownups nowadays. Give your doctor a chance now, BEFORE you get sick. Go to see him!

4. Keep clean

Plenty of baths, lots of soap. Clean hands, clothes, houses, beds! Get fresh air, sunshine. Drink lots of water.

5. "Play" some each day

Romp with the family, visit with friends, take walks, play games—or do whatever you like to give your mind and body a change from the daily grind on the job. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Life insurance has provided the means to keep millions of Americans in health and security. This message is one way life insurance companies believe they can help you to help win this war. Institute of Life Insurance, 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Interior Bungles Agency Shift to Chicago

Of all the bungling that goes on around here, the transfer of the three Interior agencies to Chicago is just about tops. Eight months ago the Fish and Wildlife Service, National Park Service and the Bureau of Indian Affairs were ordered moved to Chicago "within 60 days." The employes in these agencies didn't know from one day to the next when the move would be made. Finally, Fish and Wildlife was ordered to move over the weekend. But it's 225 employes will arrive in Chicago today with no offices to move into. Ira N. Gabrielson, chief, now plans to open temporary offices in the Bismark Hotel.

Public Buildings Administration, which was described yesterday by Interior officials as "incompetent, inefficient, and a miserable excuse for a Federal agency," not only failed to provide the space it promised but it also failed to tell the department that offices in the Merchandise Mart wouldn't be ready for an indefinite period. It may be another month before the agency has its offices. An Interior official who inspected the offices over the weekend reported he found a pipsqueak PBA inspector arguing over the cost of alterations with workmen, something, the official said, over which the inspector had no control. "I've been in Government a long time," commented an Interior official, "but I've never seen a job that was more terribly mishandled than our move." Incidentally, Fisheries is setting up a liaison and coordinating office with about 30 employes. A. M. Day heads up the liaison office.

Check-Cashing Service

A new plan is being worked on by top Federal officials that would make it easier for employes to cash paychecks. It's proposed — and Postmaster General Walker has it under consideration—that the Washington Postoffice and branches provide the check-cashing service. One or more windows would be set aside on paydays to provide the service. Treasury also is trying to work out some plan to cash employe checks. The war agencies are urging a service be provided. Much time is now lost by employes trying to get their checks cashed.

Federal agencies are full of confidential data, but did you ever hear of a confidential wastebasket? Board of Economic Warfare has just that—a confidential wastebasket. It looks like any ordinary metal wastebasket, but it's strictly confidential just the same. The wastebasket has hush-hush surroundings in the secret documents section. For a nursemaid, it has a guard whose red-blooded Americanism was put to a severe test before he was given the job. Each day the guard takes his basket to the various BEW offices to gather up old drafts and excess copies of confidential data. At the day's end he burns his collection.

Ike Greg is again chief of Postoffice's press section. Stenographers and typists are again in demand by Civil Service. Those who can type at 35 words a minute or take dictation at 96 words a minute can take their pick of jobs. . . . The translator register has been set up by the Civil Service Commission. It has 4607 eligibles. . . . The senior bookkeeping machine operator has 713 eligibles. . . . Civil Service also wants applicants for its junior clerk exam. More than 16,000 took the test last time it was announced and 3467 passed.

Questionnaire Curb

War Production Board has discovered a fool-proof method of stopping its industry branches from flooding private business with questionnaires. It has taken all mimeograph machines away from the branches. . . . BEW will streamline its export division as its Army officers are called into active military service. Reorganizations don't bother BEW employes, who expected to be shaken up constantly after Milo Perkins told them that "we'll undergo a constant process of reorganization. If we stopped reorganizing we'd be out of date in 90 days." . . . Dick Hollander and Chal Roberts are in London for OWI.

This month's Federal employe, official publication of the National Federation of Federal Employes, comments regarding the President's overtime pay plan for Federal workers:

"It (the bill) has been delayed because certain A. F. L. groups are stubbornly insisting on a bonus which they can't possibly get. Intelligent Federal employes do not support a bill which shoots at the moon. They support a bill which can be enacted into law. That bill (the President's plan) will pass in the fall of 1942 after an unnecessary and unwarranted delay of many months."

Sound Sleeper

Berlin, Md., Aug. 16 (AP).—Fred Parsons, 60-year-old Berlin teamster, was tired. So he laid down between the rails of the railroad track here last night and went to sleep. A locomotive tender and two freight cars passed over him before the alarmed engineer could stop.

The engineer hopped out and found Parsons still asleep. He was unhurt.

Delayed Action

Patrolman W. G. Scott of Atlanta, Ga., began receiving flowers and letters of sympathy. He was puzzled until he discovered that through some mixup a report of an accident in which he broke his ankle 13 years ago was sent out recently by police headquarters. "It's tough explaining to those who sent flowers," Scott said.

Negro Groups Fight Transfer Of Committee

In protest against the placing of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee under the War Man Power Commission, headed by Paul V. McNutt, a mass meeting was held yesterday at the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, under auspices of the Washington Committee of the Negro March Movement.

Cooperating with the committee in the meeting were the Industrial Union Council of the C. I. O., the B'Nai Brith and the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, its special attorney, Charles H. Houston, speaking for the latter group.

A resolution was passed asking the President to rescind the order placing the Fair Employment Practice Committee under the Man Power Commission, and seeking further extension of the powers of the committee.

Edward E. Grusd, editor of the National Jewish Monthly, urged cooperation of Negro and Jewish people in fighting Fascism here and abroad.

The fight of Negro and white members of the C. I. O., in the South against a "reactionary poll-tax Congress," was reviewed by Jack Zucker, vice president of the Industrial Union Council.

Joseph Phillips, president of Local 203, United Federal Workers of America, cited several cases of alleged discrimination in Government service against Negroes, indicating that appeals to the Fair Employment Practice Committee had brought favorable results.

$295 in Jewelry Stolen, Including $200 Lady's Ring

The theft of jewelry valued at $295 from his home at 3229 Walbridge Place Northwest was reported to police yesterday by Henry G. Cohen. The loot included a lady's diamond ring valued at $200, and was taken, Cohen said, some time between Wednesday and Saturday.

William L. Rede, 63, a clerk in a grocery at 1000 O Street Northwest, told police he was held up at the point of a gun by a Negro late Saturday night and robbed of about $100 which belonged to his employer. The robbery took place, Reed said, while he was alone in the store.

"Yokers" or strong-arm holdup men took two watches and a small amount of money from John E. Toole, 1903 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, and Jacob Bass, 1202 Seventh Street Northwest, according to police. Toole said he was held up by three Negroes near his home and Bass said two Negroes attacked and robbed him in the 1000 block of Seventh Street Northwest.

Also reported was the theft of a $50 watch and a billfold containing a small sum of money from Lawrence Matheson, 1806 Twenty-fourth Place Southeast. Matheson told police the articles were taken from his clothing while he slept at that address.

San Carlo Troupe Plays 'Faust' Under a Threatening Sky

Fortune Gallo presents the San Carlo Opera Company in Gounod's "Faust" on Sunday night at the Potomac Watergate. The cast:

Faust ..... Eugene Conley
Marguerite .... Charlotte Symons
Mephistopheles .. Harold Kravitt
Valentine ..... Ivan Petrov
Siebel ..... Eleanor Knapp
Martha ..... Flora Shennan
Wagner ..... Burke Toye
Conductor: Angelo Canarutto.

Pluckily continuing the rain-interrupted engagement which has been extended from a week to 12 days, the San Carlo Opera Company braved dubious weather conditions last evening at the Potomac Watergate and staged the postponed performance of Gounod's "Faust" successfully. An audience of about 6000 persons took a chance with the troupe that threatening clouds would pass by on the other side of the river, and their adventurousness was rewarded. Behind the anchored barge, the vast backdrop of sky was sombre with clouds and fitfully illumined by lightning as a distant storm moved to the northward. A crescent moon peered through the wrack for a few moments before being veiled completely, and the flying scud allowed glimpses of stars overhead.

Brown

As though they were accustomed to such uncertainties, the San Carloans put on an enjoyable production of Gounod's 83-year-old musical drama, using the abbreviated four-act version, which omits the fourth act entirely and the Brocken scene from the fifth act. Five-act operas were no rarity in the period when audiences were more leisurely, but they do not fit into the modern tempo of life. Seldom in these days does one sees the Brocken scene which Gounod wrote for the production at the Paris Opera in order that there might be a traditional ballet in the work.

Eugene Conley sang the title role in a manner which increased one's admiration for his fine tenor voice and one's hopes for his future. He has an easy stage presence, confidence in his ability and engaging way with an audience. He has a good command of expressive phrasing and tonal coloring, and he knows when his tone should be lyrically dulcet or dramatically vibrant.

Charlotte Symons, who made a hurried journey to Washington to replace Dorothy Kirsten as Marguerite, must have felt that her reception by the audience repaid her for the effort. Miss Kirsten had the best of intentions, but the postponement of the opera conflicted with a radio engagement in New York yesterday afternoon and she could not return in time for the performance. The substitution was no disappointment to the listeners, who found that Miss Symons is not only experienced in the role but also vocally proficient. She sang with freshness of voice and technical skill, and the quality of her tone was always clear and pleasing.

Harold Kravitt made an excellent Mephistopheles both as to histrionic handling of the character and vocal surety. This is a part which can easily be overacted because of its melodramatic possibilities, but he kept it within bounds while projecting its traits of sardonic humor and evil power. Eleanor Knapp distinguished the role of Siebel by the youthful vitality of her impersonation and the attractive quality of her singing. She has a voice clear in its intonation and accurate in its placement.

Junk Yards Get Old Tanks

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 16.—One hundred and seventy-seven World War I tanks which have been rusting in a field at Fort George G. Meade, Md., for 25 years are finally being junked to provide metal for victory ships in World War II.

The old land leviathans are being smashed into scrap in a Baltimore yard and are being moved to the Sparrows Point furnaces of Bethlehem steel to help relieve metal shortages there.

Governmental red tape which had been binding the tanks was cut in March and now every removable part of the obsolete machines—which the Army once said couldn't exist because there was no record of them—is being smashed loose and sheared up for use in victory ship production.

In a junk yard here, 3661 tons of metal in the tanks, most of which was high-nickel steel, has been pried loose and lifted with magnets onto flat cars bound for the smelting furnaces.

Once the tanks earned the cognomen of "Yehudi buggies."

That was after scrap dealers sought them out, wanted to bid them in and move them to steel mills, only to find that the Army ordnance department could find no record of their existence.

Jehovah's Witness to Stand Trial on Draft Charge

A 33-year-old member of Jehovah's Witnesses, national religious sect, has been arrested by Fairfax County police for alleged failure to comply with Selective Service regulations because of his religious beliefs.

Taken in custody on a warrant issued from the United States district attorney's officeon Saturday, Herbert A. Parker, Negro, of Falls Church, probably will go on trial before a United States commissioner in Alexandria this week. According to officials of the county Selective Service Board, Parker failed to report for a physical examination at the board's request.

Parker was classified 4-D by the local board last year, but was later placed in Class 1-A when the board's classification was appealed by a Government appeal agent. He refused to report for the physical examination after protesting the appeal board's reclassification.

He is the second member of the religious sect charged with failure to comply with the regulations, Chairman Herbert O. Blunt said. Another member has refused to report for induction and has been designated as delinquent by the board.

Navy Man Saved From Severn River

A man in the uniform of a chief petty officer, whose name was not immediately obtainable, was rescued from the Severn River by occupants of a passing cabin cruiser, after plunging from the center of the Annapolis Bridge yesterday.

William and James Strieter of Bay Ridge, Md., and A. L. Hubbard, 800 Westlake Avenue, Baltimore, were cruising in the vicinity of the bridge, which links the Ritchie Memorial Highway with Annapolis, when the man plunged into the water.

William Strieter, a strong swimmer, dived overboard and hauled the man over the gunwhale of the pleasure craft. The cruiser pulled into the Naval Academy pier, where the man was treated for submersion and placed in the care of local authorities.

Outsiders Come to Aid Of Schools

43 Fill Ranks Of Teachers Badly Depleted by War; 15 Are Reinstated

Bolstered by scores of out-of-town replacements, a badly depleted Washington teaching staff will be able to open the coming academic year without danger of a wartime shortage, Board of Education officials disclosed yesterday.

Brought about by Government decentralization action, induction of teachers or members of their families into the armed services, absences caused by maternity, health, and educational leaves, the shortage was most acute in the elementary field, with 110 positions vacant at the end of June.

Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of the elementary grades, declared, "Were it not for the great influx of outsiders with former teaching experience, the elementary schools of the District would be faced with a most dangerous shortage, comparable to the perilous condition of this country's educational institutions following the first World War."

110 Vacancies Filled

Mr. Haycock explained that the 110 vacant positions had been filled for the coming term in the following manner:

1. Fifty-two candidates who passed the D. C. teachers' exam in June have received appointments or are expected to receive them soon.

2. Fifteen former teachers have been reinstated.

3. Forty-three outsiders received temporary appointments. These outsiders are persons with teaching experience in other States whose families have come here because of the war effort. Some of them received temporary appointments last year.

In the junior and senior high schools the threat of a teacher shortage is considerably less than in the elementary grades, with the comparatively small number of vacancies having been readily filled.

However, the two factors of the draft and the crying need for teachers in industrial arts and vocational subjects, are giving school officials much worry. These conditions may have a serious effect on the departments involved. Also, at the present time there are several vacancies in the vital industrial arts and vocational fields, with small possibility of finding capable instructors for these positions, according to the school authorities.

A critical situation might develop in the junior high schools if many of the men physical education teachers were selected for promotion to the senior high schools, in line with the new Physical Fitness for Victory Campaign, it was said.

According to the Board of Education, the enrollment at Wilson Teachers College, a city-supported institution, dropped from 509 in 1941 to 379 in 1942, a decrease of 25½%.

Normal Supply Sought

Wilson will aid the Board of Education maintain a normal teacher-supply this coming year by inaugurating a series of "refresher" courses designed to retrain inactive teachers for entrance into the Washington public school system.

The "refresher" courses start October 1 and will be held through the middle of December. Subjects to be covered in the 10 weeks include latest trends in child psychology, psychology of learning, changes in the District of Columbia curriculum, problems in the teaching of reading, and orientation into the local school system. There will be hours set aside for classroom observation also.

Registrar Clyde M. Huber of Wilson Teachers College urges all former teachers interested in entering District of Columbia schools to apply for the refresher courses.

Those enrolling will be prepared for teaching in the elementary, junior high and senior high school fields.

Government to Participate In Fire-Prevention Week

For the first time since the inception of Fire Prevention Week, which will be observed October 4-10, the Federal Government will participate in its observance, James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, announced yesterday.

In his proclamation setting the date for Fire Prevention Week, President Roosevelt said that wartime emergency makes it "essential that destructive fire be brought under stricter control in order that victory may be achieved at the earliest date." The President directed the Office of Civilian Defense and other Federal agencies to take a leading role in this year's observance.

Landis emphasized that fire damage is more than ever a national problem, "because every loss of life, materials or productive time interferes with the war effort."

Hit-Runners Injure Two In D. C. Area

Five Persons Hurt In Traffic Accidents In Nearby Virginia And Maryland

Five persons were injured in nearby Maryland and Virginia traffic accidents yesterday and police sought hit-run drivers involved in two of the accidents.

The injured:

Vickie A. Banks, 19, of 5014 North Capitol Street, possible fractured spine and fractured ribs.

Pearl Gertler, 21, of 5924 Ninth Street Northwest, fractured ribs.

Allyn Zuckler, 22, of 329 Oglethorpe Street Northwest, minor lacerations.

Miss McCortney was struck by a hit-run driver near the intersection of Glebe Road and Arlington Ridge Road at 6 p. m. The car was described as a black Ford sedan bearing Virginia license plates, and was said to have been occupied by four Negroes. The injured woman was taken to Alexandria Hospital by the Jefferson District fire rescue squad.

Miss Rogers also was struck by an unknown driver, on Franconia Road six miles southwest of Alexandria. She was taken to Alexandria Hospital.

Miss Banks, Miss Gertler and Zuckler were taken to Casualty Hospital as a result of an automobile accident at 2:45 p. m. on the Defense Highway near Glendale, Md. Police did not have a report of the accident.

Homeowners Picket Builder's Display House

Charging that developers of an Alexandria suburb have refused to heed their complaints of leaking basements, walls and roofs, two housewives yesterday established a "picket line" in front of a display home maintained by the builder.

A representative of the builder explained the apparent "leaks" actually were condensation resulting from recent heavy rains combined with high humidity in the basements of the houses.

with a bottle of NATIONAL PREMIUM

Like the few great cigars, which are considered in terms of flavor, not size or quantity, National Premium Beer must be judged in terms of its rare goodness.

Don't let's be disturbed over the limited supply. There's an answer even to this: As we smoke a fine Havana, giving thought to flavor, so we should enjoy our occasional bottle of NATIONAL PREMIUM. Serve it at 38 degrees (not too cold)—pour it with reverence and with care for a fine, creamy foam. Study the brilliance of each drop, make the most of the rare aroma, and then sip slowly—bit by bit.

This is our chance to learn to enjoy fine beer as do the great gourmets. May we drink for QUALITY—instead of quantity.

There is no other beer like National Premium. There is some to be had from coast to coast.

The Outlook for Oil

By Roger W. Babson

Most Important Commodity

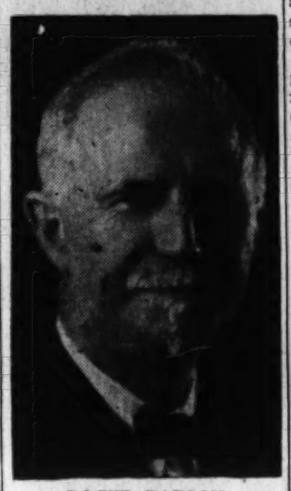
Oil may be said to be the world's most important commodity. Certainly, Hitler is today fighting the battle of his life for it. Aside from gold, oil also has probably held more fascination for men than any other business venture. Fortunes have been quickly made and as quickly lost in its discovery, production, exploitation and refinement. The attention of householders, autoists, investors, Government authorities and our armed forces is now focused upon oil as never before.



ROGER BABSON

Perhaps the greatest development in our own oil industry may shortly come from the production of butadiene and styrene. These are essential ingredients of synthetic rubber, particularly the buna type. Only small additions to plants and but little use of critical materials is necessary for existing refineries to begin turning out these badly needed products. This represents an entirely new phase of the search for the "royal road" to synthetic rubber. It is quite apart from the Government's other programs now under way. The successful production of rubber from oil will contribute materially to our war effort. It may also mean the difference between riding and walking.

It is not farfetched to speculate that some day we may derive a great part of our rubber requirements from crude oil sources. Oil is valuable for many purposes aside from running automobiles, lubricating machinery and heating homes. Even the so-called impurities in oil, such as sulphur, asphalt and wax, have great value. The major producing and refining companies are constantly seeking new uses for the increasing variety of products from their stills. Stockholders in these companies should ultimately profit from the results of this research and development work.

Of utmost concern is the situation relative to fuel oil. The Eastern section of the country is bothered by lack of sufficient transportation facilities. There is little question but what the East will suffer as a result this winter. However, the rest of the country has also need for some uneasiness. Inventories of fuel oil are around their low point for the past five years, now off 18 per cent compared with the same month a year ago.

Nation-wide rationing of gasoline is probably out until after elections. It is entirely possible that well before we can get into production of synthetic rubber worn out tires and the subsequent laying up of automobiles will ease the gasoline situation. My best guess, however, is that rationing will increase rather than decrease for the Nation as a whole. It has been said that to put 1000 Allied planes over Cologne took one million gallons of aviation gasoline. That required 200,000 barrels of crude petroleum. Add to the Cologne raid gasoline required for ground use and for Allied planes the world over and you will get some conception of the military gasoline needs. Much of the gas used must be supplied by the United States.

As yet, however, we have hardly tapped our gasoline supplies for war requirements. Stocks on hand compare favorably with a year ago, standing for the last month of record at about 86,730,000 barrels. But automobile users even outside present restricted areas are bound to be pinched unless production of gasoline rises. For the last month of record it was some three hundred thousand barrels less than for the corresponding period last year. This unfavorable comparison will probably continue until the German submarines are eliminated. Less gas for all except military needs will bring distnict changes in methods of doing business and in personal ways of living.

Prices in the oil industry have been the best for many years. Gross income is rising although, on account of taxes, the net is off. However, present dividend requirements are in the main covered. Oil shares have held up remarkably well and continue to make a better showing than the general market. Remember also that the producing companies constitute a good inflation hedge.

Oil stocks should essentially be classified as peace stocks. Hence, I should expect to see both the producing and distributing oil companies do much better after the war. If your investment portfolio contains a few good oil stocks you can consider them as constituting a step in the right direction come more war, peace, or inflation.

Ask Druggists To Return All Excess Quinine

By International News Service

Because of an acute shortage of quinine to combat malaria among troops in the tropics, the War Production Board last night called on all druggists to return to their sources of supply any excess stocks of quinine or similar drugs.

The quinine shortage, the WPB pointed out, has resulted primarily from the fact that the Japanese conquest of Java cut off the main source of cinchona bark, from which quinine is obtained.

With the United States conducting military operations in the tropical malaria belt, the demand has greatly increased. It has been necessary to make plans for large-scale production of synthetic quinine.

A sharp controversy has raged behind the scenes in Washington over synthetic quinine production. Holder of the patents in Winthrop Products Co., which has licensed only the Merck Co. to make the product. Efforts to extend to other big drug companies permission to make synthetic quinine are reported to have been blocked.

The WPB called attention to the fact that, under an order issued June 19, retail druggists and other sellers of quinine and totaquine have not been permitted to sell these articles except for use as an antimalarial agent.

This order, the WPB explained, applies to all stocks, no matter how small, whether in the form of powder, capsules, solutions, pills and tablets, and whether in opened or unopened packages.

Druggists and pharmaceutical and proprietary manufacturers, WPB said, may not use their stocks of quinine or other alkaloids of cinchona bark in the manufacture of products except for the purposes specified. These restrictions extend to dispensing drugs on prescriptions by physicians.

Covenant Church Pays Tribute to Dr. H. C. Davis

Honoring Dr. Harry C. Davis, who has been an elder at Covenant First Presbyterian Church for more than 20 years, Federal Communications Commissioner Paul A. Walker read a testimonial on Dr. Davis' long years of service to the church at the morning service yesterday.

DAVIS

Dr. Davis, who is secretary of the board of trustees of George Washington University, has "always" had loans out to two or three young men each year to help them complete their education, Walker said. "He has always given liberally of his time and means to the church," he added.

During the summer, Dr. Davis lives in Braddock Heights at Thistletown Cottage. His winter address is 1921 Kalorama Road.

At the Lotus you'll find Hale Hamilton, jr., and company in a new wire-walking act, adagio dancers Svita and Enis; Lou Wills, jr., who recently adorned "Best Foot Forward" with his acro-stepping, and new parade and swing numbers by the Lotus' "Broadway Beauties" . . . The Casino Royal is presenting Duke Art, who makes caricatures in clay with an accompanying patter of wise cracks; also Mary Jane Brown, one of the finest tap dancers ever, and those dizzying young lasses, the Taft-Kretlow Dancers.

STAR FACES IN STAR PLACES. Old friends and new friends of Adrian Rollini and his music are making the Dubonnet Room look like a picture magazine. Admiral Phillips of the King's Navee is a frequent guest, and there'll soon be a farewell party for him in Dubonnet. Joaquin M. Elizalde, polo-playing Resident Commissioner of the Philippines, was dining there the other eve. Representative Leo E. Allen of Illinois and his sister drop in a couple of times a week. And recently Rollini was surprised by the visit of Maj. "Bid" Allen, whom he hadn't seen since a "June Rose Ball" at England's Cambridge University in 1928 . . . Crowding the Lounge Riviera these evenings are society lasses and their uniformed beaus. We saw Ruth Dove with Lieut. Hugh Foss of the Air Corps; Milly King, daughter of Admiral Ernest J. King, with her fiance, Lieut. Jimmy McReynolds, nephew of former Supreme Court Justice

who plays the violin and piano charmingly at the Carlton Hotel

McReynolds; Jessie Kauffman with Lieut. Harry Hoskinson, whom she'll marry next Saturday . . . Charles Le Bouche of Life mag was dining in La Salle du Bois recently . . . Copacabana was the scene of a party for Jack Pryor the other eve. He's leaving the British Purchasing Commission to enter the army . . . At Hi Hat we saw that noted sports figure, Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey in his championship days. . . . And here's the pay-off! Admiral Richard Byrd, in full uniform, was carrying a tray in the Pomona last week.

"Latitude Nine," most seething Army publication we've seen, has been sent to us by Sergt. Vincent de la Garza, who used to sing and guitar so handsomely in the King Cole Room. The cover outdoes Petty, and the contents match.

BAND TRANSFORMATION. Jack Coffey's Band, now boiling up such unpredictable swing at Uline's Summer Garden, used to be a "sweet" unit. Its transformation into the high tension crew now going strong in their fifth week at Uline's, was a matter of added brasses and getting "on the beam." It's a four-star" band in both its swing and singing stars, which include Ginny Braynard, Don Siebert, Tom Pope and Ralph Tantredi.

HAWAIIAN VARIETIES. There are English, French and Chinese Hawaiian lasses among Meymo Holt's Aloha Maids, says Ray Kinney, who is presenting them with his orchestra in the Victory Room. Meymo has French, English and Hawaiian ancestors, and her family is one of the oldest in the islands. Dionne, the little zipperoo who dances in a sarong, is French-Hawaiian. Lehua, who sings "Hilo Happiness," is English-Hawaiian.

Dorothy Hutcheson, brilliant young pianist of Mayfair, has composed 75 numbers for the piano; has also written a flock of songs. Her big class of piano pupils range from 5 to 58 years of age.

SONGS THAT'LL "SEND" YOU. "I Wanna Go Back to West Virginia," now being introduced by Dick Koons' Band in the Mayflower Lounge. It was written by Washington's Grace Shannon and Bill Cmgo, who's now in Hollywood . . . "Stage Door Canteen," as sung by Sid Cowen of Ralph Hawkins' Crossroads Band at both the Earle Theater and Crossroads . . . The new arrangement of "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," played by Collins and Arlo in the Neptune Room. Collins used to be a ball player and his organ gives that "organic punch" to any song connected with baseball. . . . "Begin the Beguine," as sung at Merry-Land by Johnny Keeler when he gets in town from Bolling Field.

OF RHYTHM BOYS. Little Jack Little, now at El Patio, says Washington is going to be "the capital of the world" . . . Carr van Sickler of the Madrillon says that between the gas shortage and the muddy water that's spoiled fishing, he doesn't know what he'll do on his vacation . . . "Buddy" Harmon, singing drummer of the Rainbow Room, spends his spare time playing baseball on sand lots with the kids out in Silver Spring . . . Bob Seidell, one of Paul Kain's Glen Echo orchestra, was the editor of his high school newspaper.

WHAT'S COOKIN'? It'll make you feel like Thanksgiving to see the huge turkeys on the cold buffet table at Olmsted's . . . The meat sitch-ewation may be getting tight, but River Bend wants you to know that they still have those fine New York steaks . . . The Burlington is devoting some intensive study to beans; is serving old-fashioned bean soup; also black-eyed peas fresh from the garden . . . The salad tray at Burt's Trans-Lux is a true summertime treat, bright with colorful fruit, vegetables and greens.

11 Texas Girls Rent Big House and Make It a Real Home

Share Costs, Work And Find Happiness Living in Capital

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Hello, Longview and Henderson, Tex.

The 11 girls you sent up here into this hurly-burly, distraught, careening Capital aren't doing a bit bad for themselves. There's a reason, of course. They had some old-fashioned notions, and kept them. The main one is that a house ought to be a home.

That's easy to arrange, in Texas. But here, pardner, a house may rent for anywhere from $125 up a month. One pays it and worries so much in it that it's never a home. But your 11 girls beat it by living, all 11, by themselves, in one house that rents for $175. Thus, no one is going ren-broke. And each feels that she has a house and home, and with room to turn around in, including home cooked meals and Texans to talk with.

Three Sisters in Group

Let's call the roll. Winifred Robb, War Department supervisor; Myrtle May Francisco, stenographer, Foreign and Domestic Commerce; Helen Joy Francisco, stenographer, Civil Air Patrol; Nora Lee Francisco, typist, Office Price Administration, these three sisters; Evelyn Marjorie Keller, stenographer, War Department; Jean Houston, stenographer, War Department; Wanda Stewart, clerk-typist, OPA; Mary Jane Leslie, typist, Washington Cathedral; Billie Jean Hobbs, typist, OPA; Dorothy Spence, typist, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Edith White, stenographer, Maritime Commission. The last two are cousins, and from Henderson. The others are from Longview.

The home is on Broad Branch Road Northwest, has five bedrooms, two baths a sun porch, a dining room a living room for dates and a big basement to do the family washing in. The dining room table is expensive enough for 14. They have their breakfasts and dinners there, together. These finished, turns are taken with the dishes. It takes one washer and two driers 40 mintues for the clean-up because they are strong girls, food eaters.

Carry Their Groceries

Every two weeks, each pays $5 for groceries; each week two go to the neighborhood store to tote the staple groceries home. The Longview section studied home economics in the same high school and claims that one can't learn to cook that way. Generally they all talk at once, exactly like our girls up here. So all at once they said:

"Mama taught me how to cook."

They eat much meat, and a lot of potatoes and salads. After dinner, they flop around on the overstuffed chairs and davenports, thrown in for the $175, and talk about the office, and other matters. Edith, Jean and Evelyn wear newly-placed engagement rings.

It was everyday talk in Longview and Henderson that there were eight girls to every one boy in Washington! Certainly, everybody knows it down there. Let it be; maybe it's so. Anyhow, the telephone rings enough here, and particularly in the evenings when it's known everybody's home.

So there! And none of them smokes or drinks. They said that girls in Longview and Henderson simply don't, that's all. Henderson's population, 6000; Longview's 30 miles distant, 13,000.

Don't come jingle jangling those spurs over here, offering any cigarettes. "It just doesn't look right," several said.

Truth of the matter is this—and the two blondes, eight brunettes and one redhead, who live in unbroken peace together— agreed: "People don't know how to live up here:

One said: "They don't know how to laugh or to cry."

But all like Washington. One major dislike is that the men aren't tall enough here, they agreed. It was an immediate reaction and not because the girls are tall, and would tower above their escorts. Their average height is five feet, five and a half inches.

It's just this: they haven't been here a year and that tall breed of Texans, some made taller, still, in high-heeled boots, the boys who say "I'm ready" and "Texas and the United States," aren't forgotten.

They can tell you how they all got together here and rented a house but it's too complicated. The physical fact that each can wear the other's clothing had nothing to do with it. Eleven Texans, age 17 to 21, with identical ideas and wanting a house that is home just got together, that's all.

$2,203,000 In War Bonds Sold at 'Party'

By the Associated Press

French Lick, Ind., Aug. 16.—A "million dollar war bond party" whose host was Tom Taggart, proprietor of the French Lick Springs Hotel, today turned in a bonanza of war bond purchases as Hoosier guests and those who sent their regrets bought nearly two and a quarter million dollars worth of bonds.

A respectable sale for a metropolis, it was a staggering record for this little Orange County resort town of 2042 population. At Taggart's "little party," a two-day affair attended by prominent Indianans, everything was "on the house"—except Uncle Sam's war bonds and for these the guests brandished check books and the "long green" with enthusiasm.

A Cocker Spaniel puppy, "The Squire of Stockdale," donated by movie actress Irene Dunne, was purchased for $103,000 in war bonds by Charles Bushing of Fort Wayne.

Bushing, who had also purchased an autographed copy of Hoosier cartoonist John T. McCutcheon's "Injun Summer" for $45,000 in bonds, reautographed the cartoon and sold it at auction to W. B. Stephenson of Marion, State chairman of the State war saving staff industrial division, for $103,750. (Uncle Sam has set the maximum individual bond purchase at $103,750.)

The acution was conducted by Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, Hollywood comedians who had just climaxed a tour through Indiana and other States with a total war bond sales of 40 million dollars.

Army Seeks Song For Ground Force

An official marching song for the Army Ground Forces will be selected in a contest among Army men all over the country, Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commander of the Army Ground Forces, announced yesterday.

The winning composition will be selected by Capt. Thomas F. Darcy, jr., dean of the Army Music School for band leaders here; Capt. Ammen E. Gingrich, executive officer of the school, and Chief Warrant Officer John S. Martin, chief instructor of the school.

R. L. Snodgrass Named B. & O. Vice President

THE WAR IS JOB NO. 1
FOR EVERYBODY ON THE D & H

One of the greatest battles of this war—the Battle of Production and Transportation is being decided here in America, on railroads like the Delaware & Hudson. The men, the munitions, the materials that will turn the balance in favor of America and our allies are being rushed to American seaports by rail.

Nothing can be permitted to hold up these vital shipments. The D & H has concentrated its army of trained employes, together with a fleet of gigantic new locomotives for the job of moving the mountains of materials and supplies to the world's strategic battle fronts. This is our first job.

You can help us do this job well by planning far in advance your train trips to the Adirondack Resort region or to Montreal. If you cannot get the Pullman accommodations you want remember that many Pullman cars are required for troop movements. Be satisfied to ride in a coach. Travel during mid-week if possible. When it's necessary to cancel Pullman accommodations, please do so promptly. In this way, you will be making it easier for the D & H to do its important Job No. 1.

Save Waste Fats to Make Explosives

Join the Kitchen Commandos!
LADY, how would you like to get right in the fight—to help blast Hitler & Co. off the map—to show them that we intend to keep our free way of life? Then save your waste kitchen fats! For kitchen fats make explosives. Explosives for bombs, bullets and shells to help our fighting men and our allies to victory. Join the kitchen commandos!

Save your Waste Fats this way
AFTER you've got all the cooking good from your waste fats and greases, strain them through a kitchen sieve into a clean, wide-mouthed can. Please don't use glass or paper containers. And keep them in the refrigerator or a cool, dark place. Remember that every pound of waste fat you save will make two deadly anti-aircraft shells.

Take them to your Meat Dealer
MAKE it a part of your regular routine to take the waste fats to your meat dealer, whenever you've saved a pound or more. He will pay you for them and start them on their way to the war factories. The meat dealer is doing this as a public service. You can help him greatly by delivering the fats early in the week.

The Outlook for Oil

By Roger W. Babson

Most Important Commodity

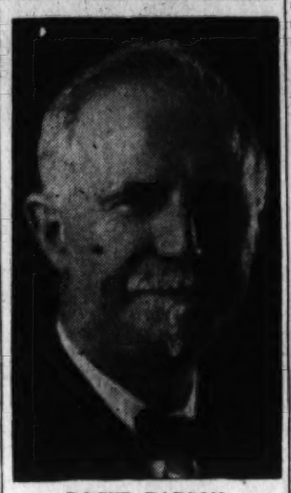
Oil may be said to be the world's most important commodity. Certainly, Hitler is today fighting the battle of his life for it. Aside from gold, oil also has probably held more fascination for men than any other business venture. Fortunes have been quickly made and as quickly lost in its discovery, production, exploitation and refinement. The attention of householders, autoists, investors, Government authorities and our armed forces is now focused upon oil as never before.



ROGER BABSON

Perhaps the greatest development in our own oil industry may shortly come from the production of butadiene and styrene. These are essential ingredients of synthetic rubber, particularly the buna type. Only small additions to plants and but little use of critical materials is necessary for existing refineries to begin turning out these badly needed products. This represents an entirely new phase of the search for the "royal road" to synthetic rubber. It is quite apart from the Government's other programs now under way. The successful production of rubber from oil will contribute materially to our war effort. It may also mean the difference between riding and walking.

It is not farfetched to speculate that some day we may derive a great part of our rubber requirements from crude oil sources. Oil is valuable for many purposes aside from running automobiles, lubricating machinery and heating homes. Even the so-called impurities in oil, such as sulphur, asphalt and wax, have great value. The major producing and refining companies are constantly seeking new uses for the increasing variety of products from their stills. Stockholders in these companies should ultimately profit from the results of this research and development work.

Of utmost concern is the situation relative to fuel oil. The Eastern section of the country is bothered by lack of sufficient transportation facilities. There is little question but what the East will suffer as a result this winter. However, the rest of the country has also need for some uneasiness. Inventories of fuel oil are around their low point for the past five years, now off 18 per cent compared with the same month a year ago.

Nation-wide rationing of gasoline is probably out until after elections. It is entirely possible that well before we can get into production of synthetic rubber worn out tires and the subsequent laying up of automobiles will ease the gasoline situation. My best guess, however, is that rationing will increase rather than decrease for the Nation as a whole. It has been said that to put 1000 Allied planes over Cologne took one million gallons of aviation gasoline. That required 200,000 barrels of crude petroleum. Add to the Cologne raid gasoline required for ground use and for Allied planes the world over and you will get some conception of the military gasoline needs. Much of the gas used must be supplied by the United States.

As yet, however, we have hardly tapped our gasoline supplies for war requirements. Stocks on hand compare favorably with a year ago, standing for the last month of record at about 86,730,000 barrels. But automobile users even outside present restricted areas are bound to be pinched unless production of gasoline rises. For the last month of record it was some three hundred thousand barrels less than for the corresponding period last year. This unfavorable comparison will probably continue until the German submarines are eliminated. Less gas for all except military needs will bring distnict changes in methods of doing business and in personal ways of living.

Prices in the oil industry have been the best for many years. Gross income is rising although, on account of taxes, the net is off. However, present dividend requirements are in the main covered. Oil shares have held up remarkably well and continue to make a better showing than the general market. Remember also that the producing companies constitute a good inflation hedge.

Oil stocks should essentially be classified as peace stocks. Hence, I should expect to see both the producing and distributing oil companies do much better after the war. If your investment portfolio contains a few good oil stocks you can consider them as constituting a step in the right direction come more war, peace, or inflation.

Ask Druggists To Return All Excess Quinine

By International News Service

Because of an acute shortage of quinine to combat malaria among troops in the tropics, the War Production Board last night called on all druggists to return to their sources of supply any excess stocks of quinine or similar drugs.

The quinine shortage, the WPB pointed out, has resulted primarily from the fact that the Japanese conquest of Java cut off the main source of cinchona bark, from which quinine is obtained.

With the United States conducting military operations in the tropical malaria belt, the demand has greatly increased. It has been necessary to make plans for large-scale production of synthetic quinine.

A sharp controversy has raged behind the scenes in Washington over synthetic quinine production. Holder of the patents in Winthrop Products Co., which has licensed only the Merck Co. to make the product. Efforts to extend to other big drug companies permission to make synthetic quinine are reported to have been blocked.

The WPB called attention to the fact that, under an order issued June 19, retail druggists and other sellers of quinine and totaquine have not been permitted to sell these articles except for use as an antimalarial agent.

This order, the WPB explained, applies to all stocks, no matter how small, whether in the form of powder, capsules, solutions, pills and tablets, and whether in opened or unopened packages.

Druggists and pharmaceutical and proprietary manufacturers, WPB said, may not use their stocks of quinine or other alkaloids of cinchona bark in the manufacture of products except for the purposes specified. These restrictions extend to dispensing drugs on prescriptions by physicians.

Covenant Church Pays Tribute to Dr. H. C. Davis

Honoring Dr. Harry C. Davis, who has been an elder at Covenant First Presbyterian Church for more than 20 years, Federal Communications Commissioner Paul A. Walker read a testimonial on Dr. Davis' long years of service to the church at the morning service yesterday.

Dr. Davis, who is secretary of the board of trustees of George Washington University, has "always" had loans out to two or three young men each year to help them complete their education, Walker said. "He has always given liberally of his time and means to the church," he added.

During the summer, Dr. Davis lives in Braddock Heights at Thistletown Cottage. His winter address is 1921 Kalorama Road.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

STARLIGHT ROOF STANDS BY. Instead of closing right after Labor Day, as in the past, the Starlight Roof will remain open until September 12, maybe until September 19, if the weather continues summery. Between Arthur Warren's silky dance music and the lush summer heat, Starlight has run up unprecedented attendance records. So there'll be no closing until there's a cool snap of autumn in the air.

Jules James, poised owner of Restaurant "400," was recently surprised a bit by an order for gallons of borscht to be served at a movie preview at the Variety Club. Borscht was served in the picture and the press agent refused to be outdone by the producer.

THE NEW SHOWS. It's circus time on the Shoreham Terrace. The Flying Siegrists will dive and skim on their trapezes more than 100 feet over the crowd. Dancers Peggy and Moro, also fetching Barbara Blane, are held over . . . At the Lotus you'll find Hale Hamilton, jr., and company in a new wire-walking act, adagio dancers Svita and Enis; Lou Wills, jr., who recently adorned "Best Foot Forward" with his acro-stepping, and new parade and swing numbers by the Lotus' "Broadway Beauties" . . . The Casino Royal is presenting Duke Art, who makes caricatures in clay with an accompanying patter of wise cracks; also Mary Jane Brown, one of the finest tap dancers ever, and those dizzying young lasses, the Taft-Kretlow Dancers.

McReynolds; Jessie Kauffman with Lieut. Harry Hoskinson, whom she'll marry next Saturday . . . Charles Le Bouche of Life mag was dining in La Salle du Bois recently . . . Copacabana was the scene of a party for Jack Pryor the other eve. He's leaving the British Purchasing Commission to enter the army . . . At Hi Hat we saw that noted sports figure, Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey in his championship days. . . . And here's the pay-off! Admiral Richard Byrd, in full uniform, was carrying a tray in the Pomona last week.

"Latitude Nine," most seething Army publication we've seen, has been sent to us by Sergt. Vincent de la Garza, who used to sing and guitar so handsomely in the King Cole Room. The cover outdoes Petty, and the contents match.

BAND TRANSFORMATION. Jack Coffey's Band, now boiling up such unpredictable swing at Uline's Summer Garden, used to be a "sweet" unit. Its transformation into the high tension crew now going strong in their fifth week at Uline's, was a matter of added brasses and getting "on the beam." It's a four-star" band in both its swing and singing stars, which include Ginny Braynard, Don Siebert, Tom Pope and Ralph Tantredi.

HAWAIIAN VARIETIES. There are English, French and Chinese Hawaiian lasses among Meymo Holt's Aloha Maids, says Ray Kinney, who is presenting them with his orchestra in the Victory Room. Meymo has French, English and Hawaiian ancestors, and her family is one of the oldest in the islands. Dionne, the little zipperoo who dances in a sarong, is French-Hawaiian. Lehua, who sings "Hilo Happiness," is English-Hawaiian.

Dorothy Hutcheson, brilliant young pianist of Mayfair, has composed 78 numbers for the piano; has also written a flock of songs. Her big class of piano pupils ranges from 5 to 58 years of age.

SONGS THAT'LL "SEND" YOU. "I Wanna Go Back to West Virginia," now being introduced by Dick Koons' Band in the Mayflower Lounge. It was written by Washington's Grace Shannon and Bill Cmgo, who's now in Hollywood . . . "Stage Door Canteen," as sung by Sid Cowen of Ralph Hawkins' Crossroads Band at both the Earle Theater and Crossroads . . . The new arrangement of "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," played by Collins and Arlo in the Neptune Room. Collins used to be a ball player and his organ gives that "organic punch" to any song connected with baseball. . . . "Begin the Beguine," as sung at Merry-Land by Johnny Keeler when he gets in town from Bolling Field.

OF RHYTHM BOYS. Little Jack Little, now at El Patio, says Washington is going to be "the capital of the world" . . . Carr van Sickler of the Madrillon says that between the gas shortage and the muddy water that's spoiled fishing, he doesn't know what he'll do on his vacation . . . "Buddy" Harmon, singing drummer of the Rainbow Room, spends his spare time playing baseball on sand lots with the kids out in Silver Spring . . . Bob Seidell, one of Paul Kain's Glen Echo orchestra, was the editor of his high school newspaper.

WHAT'S COOKIN'? I'll make you feel like Thanksgiving to see the huge turkeys on the cold buffet table at Olmsted's . . . The meat sitch-ewation may be getting tight, but River Bend wants you to know that they still have those fine New York steaks . . . The Burlington is devoting some intensive study to beans; is serving old-fashioned bean soup; also black-eyed pease fresh from the garden . . . The salad tray at Burt's Trans-Lux is a true summertime treat, bright with colorful fruit, vegetables and greens.

Here's some food for thought . . . that can lead to your house-for-sale being sold, your spare room being rented, your empty desk at the office being occupied. Just put a little Want Ad in The Washington Post . . . then get ready for quick, profitable action. Like this . . .

TWENTY REPLIES to his ad for a secretary proved to a business man at 1008 Investment Building that The Post gets around! In the right circles, too. Try it and see.

$10,900 HOME SOLD by L. C. Lusher, 904 10th Street N.W., after five inexpensive insertions in The Post Want Ads. Well, you home-owners, what are you waiting for?

11 Texas Girls Rent Big House and Make It a Real Home

Share Costs, Work And Find Happiness Living in Capital

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

Hello, Longview and Henderson, Tex.

The 11 girls you sent up here into this hurly-burly, distraught, careening Capital aren't doing a bit bad for themselves. There's a reason, of course. They had some old-fashioned notions, and kept them. The main one is that a house ought to be a home.

That's easy to arrange, in Texas. But here, pardner, a house may rent for anywhere from $125 up a month. One pays it and worries so much in it that it's never a home. But your 11 girls beat it by living, all 11, by themselves, in one house that rents for $175. Thus, no one is going ren-broke. And each feels that she has a house and home, and with room to turn around in, including home cooked meals and Texans to talk with.

Let's call the roll. Winifred Robb, War Department supervisor; Myrtle May Francisco, stenographer, Foreign and Domestic Commerce; Helen Joy Francisco, stenographer, Civil Air Patrol; Nora Lee Francisco, typist, Office Price Administration, these three sisters; Evelyn Marjorie Keller, stenographer, War Department; Jean Houston, stenographer, War Department; Wanda Stewart, clerk-typist, OPA; Mary Jane Leslie, typist, Washington Cathedral; Billie Jean Hobbs, typist, OPA; Dorothy Spence, typist, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Edith White, stenographer, Maritime Commission. The last two are cousins, and from Henderson. The others are from Longview.

The home is on Broad Branch Road Northwest, has five bedrooms, two baths a sun porch, a dining room a living room for dates and a big basement to do the family washing in. The dining room table is expensive enough for 14. They have their breakfasts and dinners there, together. These finished, turns are taken with the dishes. It takes one washer and two driers 40 mintues for the clean-up because they are strong girls, food eaters.

Carry Their Groceries

Every two weeks, each pays $5 for groceries; each week two go to the neighborhood store to tote the staple groceries home. The Longview section studied home economics in the same high school and claims that one can't learn to cook that way. Generally they all talk at once, exactly like our girls up here. So all at once they said:

"Mama taught me how to cook."

They eat much meat, and a lot of potatoes and salads. After dinner, they flop around on the overstuffed chairs and davenports, thrown in for the $175, and talk about the office, and other matters. Edith, Jean and Evelyn wear newly-placed engagement rings.

It was everyday talk in Longview and Henderson that there were eight girls to every one boy in Washington! Certainly, everybody knows it down there. Let it be; maybe it's so. Anyhow, the telephone rings enough here, and particularly in the evenings when it's known everybody's home.

So there! And none of them smokes or drinks. They said that girls in Longview and Henderson simply don't, that's all. Henderson's population, 6000; Longview's 30 miles distant, 13,000.

Don't come jingle jangling those spurs over here, offering any cigarettes. "It just doesn't look right," several said.

Truth of the matter is this—and the two blondes, eight brunettes and one redhead, who live in unbroken peace together— agreed: "People don't know how to live up here:

$2,203,000 In War Bonds Sold at 'Party'

By the Associated Press

French Lick, Ind., Aug. 16.—A "million dollar war bond party" whose host was Tom Taggart, proprietor of the French Lick Springs Hotel, today turned in a bonanza of war bond purchases as Hoosier guests and those who sent their regrets bought nearly two and a quarter million dollars worth of bonds.

A respectable sale for a metropolis, it was a staggering record for this little Orange County resort town of 2042 population. At Taggart's "little party," a two-day affair attended by prominent Indianans, everything was "on the house"—except Uncle Sam's war bonds and for these the guests brandished check books and the "long green" with enthusiasm.

A Cocker Spaniel puppy, "The Squire of Stockdale," donated by movie actress Irene Dunne, was purchased for $103,000 in war bonds by Charles Bushing of Fort Wayne.

Bushing, who had also purchased an autographed copy of Hoosier cartoonist John T. McCutcheon's "Injun Summer" for $45,000 in bonds, reautographed the cartoon and sold it at auction to W. B. Stephenson of Marion, State chairman of the State war saving staff industrial division, for $103,750. (Uncle Sam has set the maximum individual bond purchase at $103,750.)

The acution was conducted by Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, Hollywood comedians who had just climaxed a tour through Indiana and other States with a total war bond sales of 40 million dollars.

One said: "They don't know how to laugh or to cry."

But all like Washington. One major dislike is that the men aren't tall enough here, they agreed. It was an immediate reaction and not because the girls are tall, and would tower above their escorts. Their average height is five feet, five and a half inches.

It's just this: they haven't been here a year and that tall breed of Texans, some made taller, still, in high-heeled boots, the boys who say "I'm ready" and "Texas and the United States," aren't forgotten.

They can tell you how they all got together here and rented a house but it's too complicated. The physical fact that each can wear the other's clothing had nothing to do with it. Eleven Texans, age 17 to 21, with identical ideas and wanting a house that is home just got together, that's all.

Army Seeks Song For Ground Force

An official marching song for the Army Ground Forces will be selected in a contest among Army men all over the country, Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commander of the Army Ground Forces, announced yesterday.

R. L. Snodgrass Named B. & O. Vice President

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 16 (U.P.).—President Roy B. White of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. today announced appointment of Russell L. Snodgrass, assistant general counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., as his first's vice president in charge of finance and corporate relations. He will assume his new duties September 1.

Snodgrass joined the R. F. C. in 1932 and subsequently served as reorganization manager of the Wabash Railroad Co. and of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Co. He is a director of the Export-Import Bank of Washington, the Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Co., New York, Globe & Rutgers Fire Insurance Co. and of the First Trust & Deposit Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

FOR EVERYBODY ON THE D & H

One of the greatest battles of this war—the Battle of Production and Transportation is being decided here in America, on railroads like the Delaware & Hudson. The men, the munitions, the materials that will turn the balance in favor of America and our allies are being rushed to American seaports by rail.

Nothing can be permitted to hold up these vital shipments. The D & H has concentrated its army of trained employes, together with a fleet of gigantic new locomotives for the job of moving the mountains of materials and supplies to the world's strategic battle fronts. This is our first job.

You can help us do this job well by planning far in advance your train trips to the Adirondack Resort region or to Montreal. If you cannot get the Pullman accommodations you want remember that many Pullman cars are required for troop movements. Be satisfied to ride in a coach. Travel during mid-week if possible. When it's necessary to cancel Pullman accommodations, please do so promptly. In this way, you will be making it easier for the D & H to do its important Job No. 1.

Join the Fight with Your Frying Pan!

Join the Kitchen Commandos!

LADY, how would you like to get right in the fight—to help blast Hitler & Co. off the map—to show them that we intend to keep our free way of life? Then save your waste kitchen fats! For kitchen fats make explosives. Explosives for bombs, bullets and shells to help our fighting men and our allies to victory. Join the kitchen commandos!

Save your Waste Fats this way

AFTER you've got all the cooking good from your waste fats and greases, strain them through a kitchen sieve into a clean, wide-mouthed can. Please don't use glass or paper containers. And keep them in the refrigerator or a cool, dark place. Remember that every pound of waste fat you save will make two deadly anti-aircraft shells.

Take them to your Meat Dealer

MAKE it a part of your regular routine to take the waste fats to your meat dealer, whenever you've saved a pound or more. He will pay you for them and start them on their way to the war factories. The meat dealer is doing this as a public service. You can help him greatly by delivering the fats early in the week.

Loew's Capitol Also Has World Premiere on Fire

Fay Bainter, Edward Arnold Booked to Attend; Willard Roof Players Acquire Brilliant Artiste; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT NEVER RAINS but it pours—as anybody with an eye to the August weather should know by now. Same way with "world permeers."

No sooner have the Earle Theater and Columbia Pictures established a seeming one-picture monopoly on the hot-weather, first-time-on-any-screen business, with "The Talk of the Town," opening Friday on Thirteenth Street, than Loew's Capitol gives out with the weekend announcement that for the first time in two years it will give the world its first peek at a new picture of five-star rating some time along about mid-September. This will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's already much-talked-about "The War Against Mrs. Hadley."

FAY BAINTER

As in the case of "The Talk of the Town," which hinges heavily upon a Supreme Court appointment, "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" should be of particular interest to the National Capital. Mrs. Hadley, portrayed by Fay Bainter, is a Washington woman, residing in Georgetown. Edward Arnold is cast as one of the higher-ups in the War Department. The drama revolves around a rich Washington "cliff dweller," who tries to ignore the war, since it interferes with her personal and social life. When the impact is felt by her own family, that is something else again.

While there have been many films concerned chiefly with the battlefronts, "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," like "Mrs. Miniver," is a drama of the home front. Throughout the action, the activities of the various civilian defense organizations—air raid wardens, canteen workers, Red Cross units, etc.—as they function in the District, are prominent factors in the development of the plot.

One of the more glowing promises held out by Howard Dietz, vice president of M-G-M, and Eastern Division Manager Carter T. Barron, of Loew's Inc., is that when "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" is unfurled here, Fay Bainter and Edward Arnold, the costars, will be present in person to lend luster to the occasion. Both have enormous followings among the local partisans of both stage and screen. Surrounding them in the picture will be many others enjoying high esteem among the local gentry, including Richard Ney, currently scoring such an emphatic hit in "Mrs. Miniver," his first picture; Spring Byington, Van Johnson, Dorothy Morris, Jean Rogers, Miles Mander, Halliwell Hobbes and Frances Rafferty.

It is possible to see a good deal of several players on the local screens this week. In case you hadn't noticed, Teresa Wright is covering herself with glory in both "Mrs. Miniver" and "Pride of the Yankees;" Jonathan Hale is on view in both "Calling Dr. Gillespie" and "Flight Lieutenant," and Minor Watson is prominent in the casts of both "Flight Lieutenant" and "The Big Shot." Not that it matters.

A luminous, triple-threat addition has been made to the roster of the Willard Roof Players in the delightful person of Yukona Cameron, actress, concert pianist and prima donna. "Lady Yukona" was last seen on a local stage at the National in Clare Boothe's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," but will be remembered prior to that as the statuesque partner of Al Trahan in one of the best standard vaudeville acts that has survived the years. And even before all that, Miss Cameron was a concert Soprano and pianist out Chicago way. She joined the cast of "The Nights in a Barroom" last Tuesday night—much to Dick Midgely's delight—but will not display the full flower of her versatile talents until she really gets going in "From Rags to Riches," Managing Director Harry P. Somerville's next bill. "Lady Yukona," if you haven't already suspected, has what it takes to blow the roof practically off the tenth floor "music hall." King George V of England thought so, at any rate, when she appeared before him with the Trahan in a command performance.

Dots and Dashes

This is a nourishing business we're in . . . Because Cary Grant is virtually nuts about it in "The Talk of the Town," we discovered a kettle of borscht on our desk Saturday, "with an egg in it—maybe," and sour cream to be added, if you like it that way . . . How would we know? . . . Representatives of the motion picture industry in the District, Virginia and Maryland have given their pledge to John J. Payette, of Warner Brothers, and J. Edward Fontaine, of Paramount, cochairmen of the Motion Picture Division of the American Field Ambulance Service, to provide 10 ambulances for that branch of the war service . . . The sizable job has been allocated as follows: Two ambulances to be provided by the Variety Club of Washington; two by the exhibitors of the District of Columbia; three by the theatermen of Maryland and three by the Virginia exhibitors . . . Committees for all groups have been appointed to be in charge of the drives for funds . . . The third "Divertissement Under the Stars," in the Roosevelt Community Center Armory Courtyard, tonight at 8, will feature Manuela and Aurora Adeva, dancers, and "The dog with the high school education" .

So-These-Are-What-They-Call-the-Dog-Days Note

Gayety

Happy days are here again for burlesque fans. Before one of the largest crowds ever to attend an opener here, the Gayety Theater yesterday inaugurated a new season of burlesque with a fast-moving and entertaining musical, entitled "Follies of 1942".

Heading a cast of fine entertainers is the lovely, titian-haired Eleanor Sheridan, a newcomer to the profession, whose work in the current bill is likely to established her as one of the big stars on the circuit.

The comedy portion of the bill is highlighted by some unusually funny scenes enacted by Jack Diamond and Harry LeVan, two veteran comedians. Diamond, in particular, is ridiculously effective in every "skit", while LeVan's work shows great improvement over previous seasons. Ethel DeVeaux, one of the best "talking women" in the business, and Lester Mack straight man, render invaluable aid to the lighter moments of the frolic.

Aside from the devasting Miss Sheridan, the distaff portion of the revue has attractive Helen Colby and the petite and talented Pen Raymond. Miss Colby's beauty parades are first-rate, while the acrobatic dancing by Miss Raymond is no less effective.

Completing the cast of a gala opening show are Otto Eason, a sepian youth whose educated feet on skates will amaze you; Andy Arcary, whose accordion numbers score a real hit, and the ballroom dancing a Montez and Marie—ART JOHN.

Trans-Lux

It is the story of Soviet Russia and a story quite different from what most of us have been led to believe. If you have had doubts about Russia, you should see this factual film. It not only will dispel your fears, but you will appreciate more fully the Russian character, and realize the importance of Russia as an ally. The picture is absorbingly interesting, and outstanding among those coming out of the war.

Splendid news pictorials are supplementary to the showing of this extraordinary two-reel feature.

Radio commentator, Johannes Steel, substituting for H. V. Kaltenborn in his screen presentation, answers these questions: 1. How long will the war last? 2. Why Russia has to wait for Japan to attack her? 3. What is happening, politically, in Spain? And what part will Spain and Portugal play in the future theater of war?

The subject in the case of Tex McCrary, the other Trans-Lux news analyst, is "Our Debt to the People of Russia."

In Simultaneous Screen Hits

TERESA WRIGHT,
hailed as the "young actress of the year," whose diverse and charming talents are being brilliantly displayed in "Mrs. Miniver" and "The Pride of the Yankees," currently on view at Loew's Palace and RKO-Keith's theaters, respectively. Miss Wright previously had been seen in only one film, the screen version of Lillian Hellman's "The Little Foxes," an eloquent forerunner of her later triumphs

HEDDA HOPPER

Inside Hollywood!

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 16. Met up with good-looking John Gunther, journalist and author who's forever writing the "inside" on countries, and asked him what "inside" he knew on this town. Seems Darryl Zanuck asked Gunther, who has been touring Army Signal Corps camps, to write a Signal Corps story. He's doing that now with Mickey Uris. Besides which, he's writing the commentary on "Thunderbirds," Twentieth Century's story of Allied war pilots.

He's working with Anatole Litvak and Frank Capra on the war documentary these two are doing, which is expected to be one of the best films to come out of this war.

Director E. H. Griffith is hard at work on the new Fred Astaire picture, "Look Out Below," which he'll make at his old camping ground, RKO, with David Hempstead producing and Johnny Mercer tapping out the tunes. I asked Fred about the rumor that he won't dance in this one. He says 'tain't so.

He plays a flyer. Says story's more serious than his usual type of picture, and that's why he likes it. He's feeling fine these days—weighs 131 pounds, and has weighed just about that for 20 years, despite all his dancing—or maybe because of it. Says his golf game's off, and he wouldn't be surprised if his young sons could beat him. They haven't shown much interest in dancing.

But more than anything, Fred's interested in the war, and would love to be a flyer, old as he is.

Republic got, by cable, the foreward to its picture, "Flying Tigers," from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. It reads: "Since the Flying Tigers first spread their wings above China, the enemy has learned to fear the intrepid spirit they displayed in the face of his superior numbers. They have become the symbol of the invincible strength of the forces now upholding the cause of justice and humanity. The Chinese people will preserve forever the memory of their glorious achievements."

"Ice-Capades" has lost two more skaters to the service—Pierre Benoit, Canadian champion, and Robin Lee, American star.

Universal is losing 15 out of 50 of its stunt men within the next weeks to the service, so now's as good a time as any, it figures, to start doing movies that don't call for hard knocks.

First will be a series of psychological murder mysteries of the "Night Must Fall" type, in which the murders are quiet, sly affairs, with only the stars cracking safes and skulls.

LEONARD LYONS

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Aug. 16.

At the White House luncheon for Queen Wilhelmina, the President told the story of the old Vanderbilt estate in Hyde Park, which recently was presented to the Government. When the trustees of the estate first offered it to the Presidnt, he said he'd first have to discuss it with the commission in charge of such matters. Roosevelt told this commission: "I'd suggest that you accept it. The house is worthless. It's an awful house. But the land has historical value" . . . The commission examined the property, and reported: "We're accepting it, not because of the land, but because of the house" . . . "You mean you like that house?" asked the President . . . "No. It's a monstrosity," was the answer. "But we've been making a survey of such houses, and we feel that this one should be preserved—as an example of the rapidly vanishing millionaire class."

In an effort to defeat Representative Barry—the isolationist Congressman who beat Brunner in the Democratic primaries in Queens—the Republicans may be persuaded to withdraw their candidate, Rawlins, and have Brunner run on the G. O. P. ticket, with A. L. P. backing . . . Abe Feder, the lighting expert who started with WPA shows and then worked for Sam Harris, will do the lighting for St. Patrick's Cathedral . . . Clifford Odets, who wrote the George Gershwin movie, may direct it. Odets now is "testing" John Garfield for the Gershwin role—but Clifford is the one being tested . . . The OWI is bidding for Lieut. Comdr. Paul Smith, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle.

Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, came to Philadelphia to conduct at the Robin Hood Dell. A reporter interviewed him at the home of his sister, Mrs. Meyer Davis, and asked him why he had studied to play the viola instead of another instrument . . . "I was too lazy to study the violin, so I studied the viola," said Monteux. "When I was too lazy to play the viola, I became a conductor. And when I get too lazy to conduct—then, of course, I'll become a critic."

The picture frames in every room at the Drake Hotel have photos of only two people in all of them—Lady Mendl and the former Mrs. Angier Biddle Duke . . . The Merchant Marine soon will have its own Stage Door Canteen on Broadway . . . The credits in the new hit film, "Tales of Manhattan," merely list the famous authors who wrote the six parts, but fail to designate which sequence each wrote. Ben Hecht identified his authorship by appearing for one brief flash in the Edward G. Robinson sequence he wrote . . . Miguel Covarrubias, the artist whose map of Mexico was a favorite at the World's Fair, is doing one of America.

The success of the radio adaptation of Anne Nichols' famous play, "Abie's Irish Rose," reminded Alexander Ince of the day he and Max Reinhardt produced that play in Berlin. Ince read the rave-reviews and celebrated in the customary manner—he took a blonde to Paris the very next morning . . . Ince was so elated by the notices that, as he left the hotel, he began to distribute 5-mark notes to each of the uniformed help . . . When he returned from Paris he found an envelope waiting for him. Enclosed was a 5-mark note and a formal message from the recipient explaining that he, a Danish military attache, could see no reason for accepting it.

The Republic Theater on Forty-second Street, which was closed as a burlesque house because of the nudity, now is a movie house. The current film there is "Paradise Island." The photos displayed outside are those of Balinese women, who are as exposed as any strip-teaser ever was . . . Goldwyn studied the screen tests he gave Danny Kaye last week and decided against availing himself of his contractural right to have Kaye remodel his nose . . . Pvt. Alan Manson of "This Is the Army," reports: "We receive the Equity minimum of $50 a week—one week each month" . . . Ernest Truex may return to Broadway in the Theater Guild's "Mr. Sycamore."

A. L. BALL AIN'T WHAT IT USED TO BE

POVICH

Williams says he isn't alibiing for a batting average that is off 60 points from last season. I'm hitting around .345 and leading the league, and any time I'm leading the league I don't have any squawk," says the lengthy Ted, "but I'll argue with anybody who says you can ride that ball as far as you could last year."

For the first month and a half of the season, the ball was as lively as last year's, says Williams, "but in the last couple of months they've been using that reused yarn. That has made a lot of difference. If I never realized it before, I knew it the other night in Washington.

"I banged one of Masterson's pitches in the ninth inning and it felt like the sweetest sock I ever made. It came off the bat like a streak, and high, and I'd have bet that it would clear the right field fence by plenty. I started to jog around the bases and I couldn't believe it when I heard that ball hit the fence. I had to turn on some speed to make a two-base hit, out of it. Brother, if that ball doesn't go over the fence, we've got a dead ball on our hands."

Thumping Theodore like to use himself as a gauge in the matter of the dead or lively ball as the case may be. "Look what has been happening to me," he says. "Last year, I banged 17 of my home runs into the right field bleachers here in Fenway Park. During the last two months since that ball went dead on us, I've hit only three homers into right field. You swing your head off and pray that you hit a line drive these days. Those high fly balls that used to clear the fences aren't going anywhere.

Line Driver Hitters Are Better Off

"Im lucky that I'm a line-drive hitter sometimes. Those long fly ball boys are taking a tough rap. Look at a fellow like Harland Clift of the Browns. He used to hit 35 home runs a season. He won't hit ten this year. DiMaggio's way off too. There'll be pretty close to 100 less home runs in the league this year than last. And don't tell me the pitching is this much better. It's that ball they've put into play."

Williams likes the Wasnington pitching, incidentally. But not in a complimentary sort of way. He likes the Washington pitching because against the Nats this year he has batted a cool .458. He has hit the St. Louis Browns' pitching for a .421 average, and that's another reason why he's leading the league. The two clubs that have stopped Williams are the White Sox and the Yankees, against whom he has hit .250 and .261, respectively, this season. The secret of the White Sox pitchers' success against Williams may be the riding the Boston slugger takes from Jimmy Dykes, Mule Haas and the White Sox bench generally. "I'm a rabbit-eared guy and I hear everything that is said on the bench," says Williams. "Those White Sox really hand it out to me."

It has been said frequently that Williams if he were in a Yankee uniform and given the short right field fence in Ruthville to shoot at, would surpass Babe Ruth's record of 61 home runs. But the figures thus far don't bear out that contention. Williams has played about eight games in Yankee Stadium this year, and he has hit only one home run in the park. "I don't like it," says Ted. "Those shadows don't do the hitters any favor."

Hudson Is League's Toughest Pitcher

As for the league's pitchers, Williams says he guesses that Sid Hudson is the toughest guy he has to face. "I manage to hit him pretty well, but I'd rather not be swinging against Hudson," he says. "He's the only pitcher in the league who gets in a hole with two balls and no strikes on you, and then has a whole lot extra to put on the ball. That Hudson stands out there and throws everything overhand, a fast ball, his curve and lately a slider that moves pretty quick. He makes a guess hitter out of me, but I've been pretty good when I've been guessing."

Once more Theodore is slightly peeved at some of the Boston baseball writing press who are beginning to treat his enlistment in the Navy Air Forces with some sarcasm due to the long delay in his call to active service.

One Boston baseball writer pointed out the other day, that Wallace, a pitcher for the Braves who had enlisted in the Naval Air Forces after Williams and Johnny Pesky of the Red Sox had enlisted, was already called to active service. He wondered, in print, why the long delay in Williams' case.

"That guy's just trying to make trouble," says Ted. "He ought to find out things before he tries to write about 'em. Sure, we all enlisted in the Naval Air Forces, but Wallace couldn't be a flyer because he couldn't pass the eye tests. So that put him with a ground outfit. The ground outfit doesn't have as long a waiting list as the flying school, and that's why we haven't been called yet. I hope people will get this straight. I'm ready to go tomorrow, if the call comes."

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 16.—Future Navy pilots, now being put through their physical training program by such officer-coaches as Bernie Bierman, Jim Crowley and Sam Barry, are perhaps the best fed servicemen in the world.

CONSIDINE

The head man of the vast training program, Comdr. Tom Hamilton, former Navy football coach, has seen to that. They get more than twice as many calories as Joe Doakes, the draftee. They get 5000 calories per day and enough proteins to clog the Panama Canal.

The idea is to create overwhelming energy and make these young Americans the roughest, toughest gang of pilots in the world. Fatty meats and fancy, highly-spiced tidbits are not on the sumptuous bills of fare at the four Navy pilot schools—at the Universities of Iowa, North Carolina, Georgia and St. Mary's College in California. Coffee has been rationed to one cup a day. Milk is the meal-time beverage: between a pint and a quart at each meal and at least a pint in midmorning.

BREAKFAST: Tomato juice, bran flakes and cream, scrambled eggs and bacon, whole wheat toast, honey, coffee and milk.

LUNCH: Canned peaches, roast beef, baked yams, string beans, Waldorf salad, toast, honey, tea and milk.

DINNER: Orange juice, thick steak, creamed potatoes, peas, lettuce, and tomato salad, toast, honey, milk, chocolate ice cream.

The Amateur Athletic Union has invited Gunder Hagg and Arne Anderson, Sweden's two great runners, to come to this country this winter to compete in the big indoor track meets. Hagg, celebrating his return to competition after being barred for padding an expense account, has recently broken the 1-mile, 2-mile, 1500-meter and 2000-meter world records. According to Jesse Abramson, a first-class track authority who has made a long-range study of him, he is a combination of Glenn Cunningham and Greg Rice, plus.

He ran the mile at Goteberg in 4:06.2, and the 2-mile at Stockholm in 8:47.8. His new record for the 1500-meter is 3:45.8 and the 2000-meter, 5:16.4.

Hagg is 23, sunken cheeked, 6 feet tall and weighs 150. He has served 13 months in the Swedish army. His records were made after an eight-month suspension. He is a fireman in the town of Gayle.

With hockey probably out for the duration, he might become one of the bigger indoor sports sensations of 1942-1943. All he has to do now is to find some way to get from Sweden to Madison Square Garden—after which he need not worry about an expense account for years to come.

Belmont race officials are planning a stunning war-charity program. Under present plans, they will give away all the profits of the final week of their fall meeting, and that means about a half a million dollars.

Lee Savold, Musto Both Confident

Heavyweights Fight 10-Rounder Tonight At Stadium; Parks in Semi-Windup Bout

By Tony Neri

A couple of heavyweights whose boxing careers have run somewhat the same course in the last few years will have it out tonight when Lee Savold of Des Moines, Iowa, and Tony Musto of Chicago tangle in the 10-round main attraction under Joe Turner's promotion at Griffith Stadium.

With a break in the weather Turner's only wish, tonight's brawl stacks up as a good heavyweight fight and a gate of $8000 is anticipated. Forty-two rounds of boxing have been scheduled and the program is sprinkled with local talent, chief of whom is Georgie Parks, colored heavyweight star, who will meet Mike O'Dowd, youthful New Yorker, in the eight-round semi-windup.

"Heat" Is Still On

Savold, a favorite here because of past knockout wins over Claudio Villar, Neville Beech and Lou Nova, has been installed the betting choice.

Two postponements have failed to dampen the "heat" on the fight. It stands on its own merits as a contest in which either fighter can win. It is not one of those one-sided affairs. Although Savold is favored, the Des Moines heavyweight holds a healthy respect for his short opponent.

Musto recently fought Tami Mauriello a great but losing stand in New York and it was Musto's performance in that fight that prompted Matchmaker Lew Diamond to sign the Chicagoan for Washington.

Savold's manager, Bill Daly, was reluctant to have his man meet Musto, realizing that Tony is a pretty tough customer once that bell rings. But Daly agreed to the match after consulting Savold, who is confident that he can lick any heavyweight contender around. Lee hasn't been beaten for a year, his last loss being to Harry Bobo in Pittsburgh last August. Since then he's won 18 straight, many being knockouts. He polished off Teddy Wint, Lou Nova,

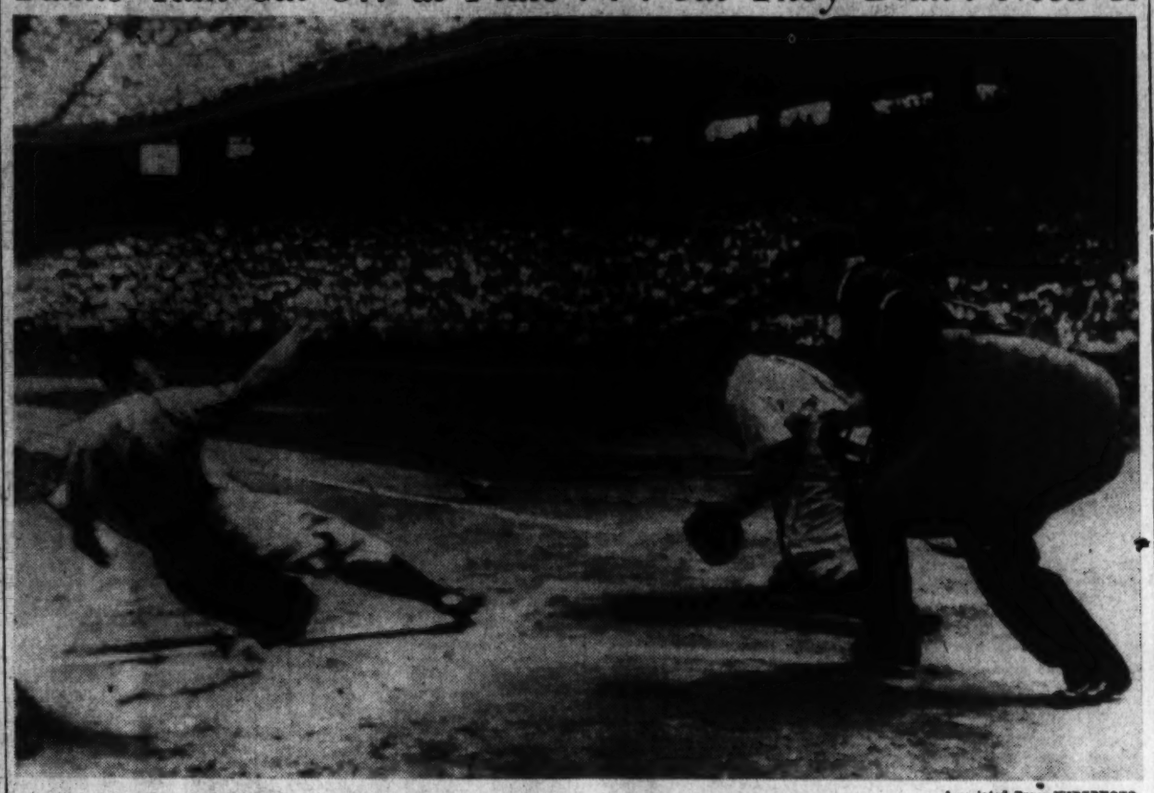
Yanks' Run Cut Off at Plate . . . but They Didn't Need It



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Yanks Trounce A's, 11-2; Game Called in Sixth

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Aug. 16.—The Philadelphia A's and New York Yankees had time for only six innings of a scheduled twin bill today, but it was time enough for the Yankees to blast out and 11-to-2 victory. With Marvin Breuer allowing only four hits for the abbreviated distance, the McCarthymen collected 13, including home runs by Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gordon.

DiMaggio's, his seventeenth, came in the third frame with a mate aboard and routed Russ Christopher. Gordon's homer, his twelfth, came in the following frame with one on. The victory was the Yanks' thirteenth in 19 games against the A's.

Cubans Defeat Grays by 4-1; Lose 2d, 1-0

The Washington Homestead Grays of the Negro National League divided a double-header with the New York Cubans yesterday, losing the opener, 4-1, and annexing the nightcap, a 7-inning affair, 1-0. Roy Partlow pitched the shutout before 7000 Griffith Stadium fans.

The Cubans opened hostilities against "Chuck" Wright, Grays' moundsman, in the first inning, with a smashing drive to left field by their shortfielder and lead-off man, Martinez. Thomas followed with a double over second, scoring Martinez, and "Babe" Brooks lashed a sharp liner to left, bringing Thomas home.

Wright tightened up after allowing 5 hits in the first inning, but the damage had been done, and the game was won before he had fairly warmed up.

In the nightcap Partlow and Morris each allowed 4 hits. But Morris made the mistake of walking "Buck" Leonard in the fourth inning. Leonard immediately pilfered second, and came home on Chester Williams' clout over the head of Perez, with the winning run.

Miss Brough Wins Finals

By International News Service

Manchester-By-The-Sea, Mass., Aug. 16.—Continuing her sweep of major women's tennis titles, 19-year-old Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., seeded fourth, this afternoon defeated top-seeded Pauline Betz of San Francisco, 6—3, 1—6, 6—3, in the finals of the Essex County Club Women's Invitation Tennis Tournament.

The victory was the second in two weeks for the national junior champion over Miss Betz who fell before the up-and-coming young star last week when Miss Brough won the eastern courts title at Rye, N. Y.

For Miss Brough it was the fourth major tournament victory in six weeks. Besides her Rye conquest she previously took the Maidstone and Middle States championships.

Miss Brough won a share in another title today when she and Margaret Osborne, San Francisco, top-seeded, defeated Miss Betz and Doris Hart, Miami, Fla., in the postponed finals of the eastern grass courts doubles championship, 6—1, 10—8.

Score Goes 'Out Of Window' When Crosby, Hope Play

By International News Service

Denver, Aug. 16.—Bing Crosby and Bob Hope wisecracked their way around the Cherry Hills Country Club layout in an exhibition golf match today to keep a throng of 5,000 persons so amused that nobody remembered to keep score—even the officials.

The famous radio and screen crooner and the equally well-known comedian, paired with big Ed Dudley of Colorado Springs, president of the P. G. A., and long-driving Lawson Little, showed their golf is almost as good as their repartee.

Takoma Softballers Win Three Contests

Takoma A. C. softball club won three games yesterday, defeating the Friendship Heights team in a double-header, 7-1 and 4-2, and the Alaskan Wolves, 1-0. Kenwood pitched two victories, beating Friendship in the opener and the Wolves. Leonard Angerman gave up one hit in defeating the Friendship Heights team in the second game.

Dodgers Blanked, 2-0, On Javery's 1-Hitter

Game Only Goes 7 Innings, 2d Postponed; Walkers' Single Only Blow Off Hurler

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 16.—The Dodgers' five-game winning streak was snapped short today when Al Javery of the Boston Braves shut out the league leaders, 2 to 0, and limited them to a single safety in a game called after seven innings because of the weather. A scheduled second game was postponed.

Javery, pitching his tenth victory of the year and his fifth shutout, was invincible except for Dixie Walker's single in the fifth. Two other Dodgers reached base on passes and were left stranded. Through today Javery had hurled 19 straight scoreless innings.

The Braves scored both their runs off Kirby Higbe, who suffered his ninth defeat. A single by Tommy Holmes, followed by a pass, a sacrifice and an infield out gave the visitors a run in the first inning. In the second frame Sibi Sisti tripled and scored on an infield hit by Holmes. Sisti also smacked a double, he and Holmes between them accounting for all four Boston hits.

Keene, Scheibener In No-Hit-, No-Run Games on Sandlots

A pair of no-hit no-run games featured yesterday's independent sandlot baseball play in the city.

Bobby Keene, a reserve first baseman for the University of Maryland nine, allowed only one foe to reach base as the Bethesda Barons whipped Rockville, 4 to 0. The lone Rockville base runner got to base on a walk and Keen faced only 28 batters.

B. Scheibener duplicated Keene's feat in pitching Capital Transit to an 11-to-0 whitewash of Rommel Athletic Club on the North Ellipse.

Gloria Callen Among 5 New Swim Champs

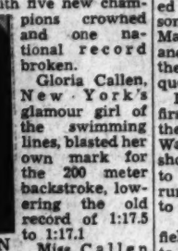
By the Associated Press

Neenah, Wis., Aug 16.—The 1942 National Women's A. A. U. swimming and diving championships closed tonight with five new champions crowned and one national record broken.



MISS CALLEN

Gloria Callen, New York's glamour girl of the swimming lines, blasted her own mark for the 200 meter backstroke, lowering the old record of 1:17.5 to 1:17.1 Miss Callen churned out the new mark during the 300-meter team medley relay. Starting for the New York Women's Swimming Association's club, Miss Callen had the required number of watches on her performance and raced on. The mark will be submitted to the A. A. U. as a new record. She holds over 30 national titles.

Betty Bemis, Indianapolis, won the individual high point championship, amassing 13 points. Nancy Merki, Portland, Oreg., star, was second with 11; Joan Fogle of Indianapolis, third with nine, and Suzanne Simmerman, Portland, fourth with eight.

The Riviera Club, Indianapolis, won the high team award with 53 points. The Multnomah Athletic Club, Portland, was second with 33, and the New York Women's Swimming Association team third with 23.

The 100 meter breast-stroke, a new championship event, was won by Jane Dillard Fort Worth, Tex. Miss Dillard led all the way and finished in 1:28.3. Lorraine Fischer, New York, was second ahead of Patty Aspinal, Indianapolis.

The fifth new champion of the meet was crowned in the 3 meter diving championships, where Anne Ross of Brooklyn's St. George Dragon Club triumphed with 118.8 points. Helen Crelenkovich, San Francisco, who won the crown the last two years, did not defend it.

Cards Beat Reds Twice, Gain Ground

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 16.—St. Louis' fighting Cardinals slashed 1½ games off Brooklyn's National League lead today as they whipped the Cincinnati Reds twice, 10 to 5 and 6 to 3, while the Dodgers were shut out by Boston. St. Louis now trails by eight games.

In each contest it was a 5-run inning which clinched victory.

The big eighth of the first game was not so surprising as it had been a free hitting affair, a total of seven pitchers appearing for both teams. But the fifth inning uprising in the second fray came like a bolt from the blue and struck hardest at Left-hander Johnny Vandermeer who had allowed only one hit in four frames and enjoyed a 1-to-0 lead.

Johnny Hopp fanned to start it off. Then Pitcher John Beazley—who by winning racked up his fourteenth victory of the season—singled to center for the second hit off Vandermeer. Five more followed in succession and Gene Tompson replaced Vandermeer. Marty Marion singled another run across and Hopp and Beazley batted for the second time before the Reds quenched the fire.

In the last of the eighth of the first game with the score tied and the bases loaded with none out, Walker Cooper hit a fly ball to short left. This was good enough to score Terry Moore with the run that would have been sufficient to win.

Big Eric Tipton, the Red's left fielder, threw wild to third trying to nab Enos Slaughter, who went on to score. And Stan Musial, already rounding second, sped on after Slaughter had slid around Catcher Dick West for a third tally as Relief Pitcher Joe Beggs re-

Talbert Wins Casino Tennis

By the Associated Press

Newport, R. I., Aug. 16.—Second-seeded Bill Talbert of Cincinnati won the Newport Casino Tennis Tournament today, defeating top-ranked Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., 6—4, 6—3, 3—6, 4—6, 8—6.

Talbert and Schroeder then teamed to win the doubles title with a straight-set victory over George Ball of El Paso, Tex., and Richard Odman of Seattle, 11—9, 6—4, 6—4.

For the second consecutive year, Schroeder, who teamed with Jack Gramer of Los Angeles to take last year's doubles crown, finished second best in singles play. He lost in the 1941 finals to Don McNeill, who did not defend his title this time.

Griffs Suffer Second Twin Loss in Row

Masterson, Newsom, Trotter and Zuber Pounded; Butland, Terry Are Winners

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Boston, Aug. 16.—The age of miracles has ceased. The Nats, who had been burning up the league until they invaded Boston, deserted the village tonight with a four-game losing streak, after dropping a double-header to the Red Sox here today, 6 to 4 and 10 to 3.

In losing their second successive double-header to Boston the Nats weren't being defeated gracefully. Bill Butland limited them to seven hits in the opener and in the second game Yank Terry stopped them with four hits. All of Washington's runs in the second game were unearned.

Some 20,000 fans saw Boston slam Walter Masterson for 11 hits in the first game, then blast Buck Newsom, Bill Trotter and Bill Zuber for 15 hits in the second.

Newsom wasn't very brilliant. He didn't survive the first two innings, although three errors hastened his exit, and when he deserted the premises the Red Sox owned an 8-to-1 lead.

9 Bat In First

The details are too horrible to relate. The Red Sox sent nine men to bat in the first inning and in the second inning nine more Red Sox batted, which may present a rough idea of proceedings.

Singles by Dom DiMaggio, Bobby Doerr and Lou Finney, plus a double by Johnny Pesky and an overthrow to first base by Newsom that permitted two runs, gave the Red Sox a 5-run first inning. In the second inning errors by George Case and Johnny Sullivan, plus a single by Pesky and doubles by Ted Williams and Jim Tabor, netted Boston three more runs.

The Nats had taken a 1-0 lead in the inning when Case singled. With two out Case stole second and moved to third on a passed ball after Bruce Campbell had walked. Mickey Vernon also walked to fill the bases and Case scored when Tabor threw wild past Tony Lupien at first before Sullivan forced Evans.

Lupien's double and Finney's single produced another Boston run off Trotter in the fourth. In the sixth the Nats were presented a run when Terry threw wild into center field attempting a force play at second, permitting Sullivan, who had doubled, to score.

Another Run Scores

Singles by Lupien, Finney and Bill Conroy manufactured another Boston run in the sixth. That Conroy single was a beaut. It dropped a few feet in front of home plate while Al Evans and Roy Cullenbine debated who should take the pop fly and Lupien sprinted home from second in the confusion.

Washington picked up its final run in the ninth. Case opened with a single and moved to second as Pete Fox dropped Spence's fly. Case took third on Cullenbine's grounder and scored on another infield tap by Campbell.

Terry was courting disaster with eight walks but the Nats twice permitted him to ease out of predicaments with the bases loaded.

Ben Hogan's 278 Wins Rochester $5000 Open; Craig Wood Second

By the Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Aug 16.—Ben Hogan, the Hershey, Pa., links wizard, added the $5000 Times-Union Open to his long list of triumphs today by turning in a final round four over par 74 for a 72-hole total of 278.

Hogan, to whom the victory was worth $1000, led blond Craig Wood, Mamaroneck, by three strokes. Wood turned in a 72 on the last round for 281, and one stroke back came Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Philadelphia, who carded a 73 for 282.

The little fellow from Hershey, whose success in the tournament appeared almost certain after he blazed to a record-smashing 6-under-par 64 on the first round, then followed with 68, 72 and 74, seemed content to protect the five-stroke lead he enjoyed yesterday.

He was out in 37, slipping one over par on the 201-yard third and the par four 460-yard eighth. He was even par for seven holes of the in nine, then bogied the seventeenth and eighteenth.

Ky Laffoon, the Miami, Okla., veteran, one of seven to equal par in today's finale, grabbed fourth honors with 283. Four were bunched for fifth with 284—Dutch Harrison, Camp Hill, Pa.; Mike Turnesa, Elmsford; Horton Smith, Springfield, Mo.; and Amateur Ted Bishop, Waltham, Mass. Sixth spot was shared at 285 by Jimmy Demaret, Detroit, and Henry Ransom, North Hills, Pa.

Ransom, whom gallery fans dubbed the fashionplate of the tournament," provided the day's biggest thrill when he fired an ace on 140-yard fifteenth.

Other leading scores included Sam Byrd, Ardmore, Pa., and Chick Harbert, Battle Creek, Mich., 286; Jimmy Hines, Lakeville, and Willie Goggin, White Plains, 287; Bud Lewis and Gene Kunes, Philadelphia and Amateur Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio, 288. Clay Heafner, Linville, N. C.; Ray Hill, Hershey, Pa., and Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, concluded with 289.

Gene Sarazen, the Brookfield (Conn.) squire, wound up with 290, while such luminaries as Ralph Guldahl, Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., and long hitting Jimmy Thomson, Chicopee, Mass., were away back with 293.

Hogan's score brought a grain of satisfaction to P. G. A. Tourney Manager Fred Corcoran. He predicted 278 would be the winning figures.

Boyle's Bar Beats Creel In B League

First-Half Winners Score, 13-3; To Meet Victory Club Next; Fort Stephens Ahead

Jacobsen's Florists won the first game of a two-out-of-three series in Section A of the National City League yesterday from Naiman Photos, 4-2, on the Ellipse.

A three-run outburst in the seventh inning clinched matters for the winners. Catcher Jello Lagos was outstanding for Jacobsen, getting two hits and stealing four bases, including a theft of home in the fourth inning.

In Section B, Boyle's Bar pounded out a 13-3 victory over Creel Brothers in a playoff of a three-way tie. The winners will meet Victory Club next Sunday for the second-half championship. Boyle's won the first half.

Teddy Welsh fanned 12 Creel batsmen and only allowed 5 hits, while his teammates collected 18.

Savold, Musto Both Confident Of Victory

and Bill Poland in the last three months.

It was his win here over Nova on the Navy Relief card that brought Savold National prominence. Before that he was considered only a fair fighter, but the job he performed on Nova convinced many, mainly Mike Jacobs, that the Iowan can fight.

The National Boxing Association has ranked Savold No. 2 heavyweight in the country, and Jacobs, who had planned to match him with Champion Joe Louis, still has hopes of putting Lee in a title fight when and if the Brown Bomber is permitted by Army officials to fight again.

Musto's camp, however, hasn't let Lee's past record discourage its confidence of a Musto victory. After Tony had finished his training yesterday at Turner's Arena, Trainer Nick Florio pronounced him in excellent shape and predicted Musto will win.

Not many fighters have beaten the squatty Chicagoan. His nine-round stand against Louis last year before a cut eye forced his retirement is worth mentioning. Louis, who had sent all his opponents to the deck one or more times, was unable to do that to Musto and any fighter who can stand up under the Bomber's cannonading must be a pretty good country scrapper.

Tonight's main event will be broadcast over Station WWDC by Ray Carson, with the writer filling in between rounds. The match is expected to go on at 10:15, but the radio program will start 25 minutes earlier.

Supporting bouts, the opener to start at 8:30 o'clock, will pair Lew Hanbury and Roscoe Perry, both local lightweights, in a six; Ken Stribling, Washington, vs. Freddy Wally, Richmond, middleweights, in another six; Danny Petro vs. Joe Boone, bantamweights, in a four; Charley Petro vs. George Smyre, in another four, and the opening four will pit Nick Latsios and Kid Washington, welterweights.

Post Football School Opens Today at Eastern High Stadium

Each Day's Workouts Begin at 6

Schoolboys to Get Intensive Training Under Jankowski, Ehrlich, Richardson

By Bill Burnett

Met by the approval of all concerned—parents, scholastic officials and students—the second annual football school sponsored by The Washington Post opens its doors today, extending to youthful gridmen of Washington the most gainful two weeks of training possible.

Eastern High School stadium will be the site today, as throughout classes. Starting time will be 6 p. m. with each session to last approximately two hours.

Perhaps the most attractive thing about the whole course is that it's free. As one local coach has put it: "All the kids have to have is the desire." They can get a $1000 worth of coaching by just showing up."

Shoes, trunk and towels must be furnished by each student, but here's an idea of what the boys will be given without charge;

1. A place to change clothes and shower, provided by officials at Eastern.

2. Daily period of body-building exercises under the eyes of Head Coach John Jankowski and his assistants, Babe Ehrlich and Billy Richardson.

3. Discussion and demonstration of football fundamentals by guest coaches, including the best in the city.

4. Individual instruction in the principles of each position.

5. Prizes at the end of the two-week period to those who prove themselves outstanding.

Particularly agreeable to The Post's School are the parents approached on the subject. One father, whose son attended last year's school and later made a name for himself in actual play, commented:

"I figure that the Post School kept my boy from getting hurt in his own school's practice, anyway. He was tough enough then to take it. Otherwise he might have been injured like a lot of other kids because the pre-season training is rushed so much."

Calisthenics may not appeal to some of the most grid-minded Post School students, but the appearance of numerous football experts will.

From the colleges in town will come Johnny Baker, newly appointed head of George Washington's eleven, and Georgetown's wise-cracking line coach Maurice "Mush" Duopfsky for one evening stands. The D. C. Football Officials' Association will contribute "Red" Sweeney and Tommy Whelan for talks on their specialities. Hardy Pearce, head of the public school department of physical education, will top a group of scholastic experts which, of course, includes Jankowski, Ehrlich and Richardson. In addition, Orrel Mitchell of Georgetown Prep is down for a discussion of football strategy.

Approximately 100 veteran and novice football players have already signed up for the two-weeks' course and by starting time this evening the group is expected to be much larger, which proves that Washington's younger football set knows what's good for it.

Canteen Horse Show Benefits Service Men

Show Jumping Title Taken By Applejack

By Anne Hagner

Applejack was potent stuff yesterday. The "has-been" horse who two years ago was a girls' school hack, flashed back into top form to win his first jumper championship in five years at the Montgomery County Canteen Corps Horse Show at the East-West Highway grounds.

The 17½-hand gelding, one of the best jumpers in Washington in the mid-1930's, returned to the ring seriously late last year under the ownership of Gardner Hallman, who rode him to fame years ago but failed to crash into blue ribbon or championship brackets until yesterday.

But Applejack's moment of triumph, paradoxically, came not with Hallman aboard. In place of the owner of North End stables who out 150 pounds of needed flesh on the big halfbreed's lanky frame and rekindled his desire to jump was Eddie Talbert, young Washington horseman, whose build and style of riding synchronize with the movements of the mount.

Piles Up 10 Points

Long-legged Eddie, who also had the mount on him at the Columbus Horse Show several months ago, sent Applejack to blues in the triple bar and knockdown-and-out events and won several minor awards to pile up 10 points over Arnold Lusby's steady fencer, High Boy, from Southern Maryland.

Then, as if to prove that he is so completely cured of his refusals of the past few years, Applejack went in great style for his groom, Charley King, to win the grooms' class.

Upward of 1000 people thronged the picturesque meadow to see some of the best sport of the current show season and to aid the Montgomery County Chapter of the American Red Cross Canteen Corps. Service men were admitted and given luncheon free of charge.

Kristin Top Hunter

Among the hunters, Dr. John Lyon's versatile mare, Kristin, with Charles Carrico doing the saddle work, outpointed another brilliant campaigner of the past decade, Dean Rathbun, jr.'s Bon Diable, whose performances over the outside course were typical of the days when he was a champion member of Mrs. "Liz" Whitney's gray hunt team.

But it remained for Applejack's sensational rounds to steal the spotlight as spectators recalled the long road he has traveled since he emerged as a jumper prospect nine years ago, when he was a 3-year-old. Purchased by Emery Galliher, Washington sportsman, from the late Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Applejack made an enviable record in the ring despite unusual temperament. Hallman was his rider in those days.

Later he was purchased by Fenton Fadeley, jumping enthusiast for whom he won his last championship in 1937 at the Boy Scout Jamboree horse show on the Mounument Grounds. Since then he has been shown intermittently for various owners, sometimes with mild success but often with more refusals than good performances.

Tiger Rallies Beat Chisox, 3-2 and 7-3

Opener 11 Innings, Newhouser Bests Lyons; Ed Smith Beaten by Trout

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug 16.—The Detroit Tigers came from behind in both ends of a doubleheader with the Chicago White Sox today, winning the opener, 3 to 2, in 11 innings, and taking the second, 7 to 3, by virtue of a four-run rally in the sixth inning. The double victory gave the Tigers the series, three games to one.

The Tigers tied the score in the ninth inning of the first game and won in the eleventh on Ned Harris' single which scored Barney McCosky from second. Southpaw Hal Newhouser had the better of ancient Ted Lyons in a tight pitchers' duel and posted his seventh triumph against nine defeats. Lyons, who had won seven in a row, was charged with his sixth defeat. He has 10 victories.

Edgar (Lefty) Smith was nicked for two runs by the Tigers in the first inning of the second game, but the Sox tied the score in the next inning and went ahead in the third on Luke Appling's double and Joe Kubel's single. The Tigers got their four runs in the sixth on two doubles, a single, two walks, a hit batsman and an error. Paul (Dizzy) Trout, who was lifted for a pinchhitter in the Tigers' big sixth, was credited with his tenth victory.

Marcey Wins Publinks Title Over Jennings on 45th Hole, 1 Up

Defending Champ 3-Putts Last Green; Rallies Mark Match

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Earl Marcey, who has been playing public links golf since his caddy days, took time out last week to play in the District Public Links Championship for the first time in his 39 years and yesterday he was crowned champion.

The lean, lanky Marcey, who keeps up a continual line of chatter around the course, beat Defending Champion Dick Jennings 1 up in 45 holes at East Potomac after they were all even at the end of the regulation 36. By mutual agreement they decided to play nine extra holes instead of the usual quick death.

Jennings, a 24-year-old attorney who lost in the finals in 1940 and won the title last year, was an odds-on favorite to retain his title but Marcey matched him, hole for hole over the full day's golf and finally finished one better.

Marcey knew he was home as he walked off the thirty-sixth green and prepared for extra holes. At that point his 8-year-old son, who with his brother, sister and Mrs. Marcey galleried the match, walked over to his father with a rabbit's foot and said, "Here, daddy, you got to win now."

Kid Accommodated

Jennings accommodated the Marcey youngster by missing a 3-foot putt on the ninth, or forty-fifth green which would have sent the match into still more overtime. Marcey, two up and three to play, lost the next hole and halved the forty-fourth. On the last hole both were on the edge of the green and putted short, Marcey 5 feet, Jennings 3. The new champion missed his bid for a par and finished with a 3-putt green but Jennings could not take advantage of his opponent's mistake and he too three-putted for a bogey 5 to lose his title.

Marcey was also two up and three to play over the regulation distance but he lost the thirty-fourth hole, halved the next and then over-approached the thirty-sixth green and lost the hole to a par 4.

Marcey, a concrete mixing machine operator, had to come from behind earlier in the match. When they went to lunch after 18 holes Jennings was three up but Marcey managed to square the match at the 27-hole mark and from that point was never down.

Golf Was Better

The finalists played better golf than the scoring indicates, with rounds of 79 and 82 for each over the 36 holes and a 39 for Marcey to 40 for Jennings in the nine extra holes. The East Potomac course has been barely playable since the heavy rains and while it has been drying out for the past two days low scoring was next to impossible. The ball stuck where it landed, the grass was high as the course was too soggy for mowers and a combination of circumstances made 80 golf much better than it sounds.

The victory gave the 6-foot-3 Marcey a clean sweep of honors among the pay-as-you-play golfers for the season as he also won the spring tournament at East Potomac and was medalist in the current championship.

Jennings has been playing comparatively little golf this season and just decided to play two or three days in advance of the championship but Marcey went him one better. The latter, who had never taken time off for a title tourney before, told his playing partners Thursday that if he did not win the medal he would withdraw.

Marcey now owns a leg on the S. G. Loeffler trophy, the huge bronze cup which goes to the winner for a year.

Browns Gain Even Break With Indians

By International News Service

Cleveland, Aug. 16.—The Cleveland Indians and the St. Louis Browns split a double-header today before 9393 fans as the Tribe won the first in 11 innings, 3 to 2, and dropped the second, 6 to 1.

The Browns tied the first game in the ninth with a pair of runs off Chubby Dean and Harry Eisenstat, but the Indians won out in the eleventh on singles by Jeff Heath and Les Fleming, and a fly by Lou Boudreau. George Caster was the losing pitcher.

The Browns cuffed Al Milnar for four runs in the first inning of the second game and went on from there to win behind the veteran Al Hollingsworth.

Cubs Sweep Double-Header From Pirates

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Beaten twice by the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday, the Chicago Cubs today reversed the order and won both ends of a double-header, 5 to 1 and 4 to 1, to take three victories in the five-game series.

In the first game Bill Lee won his twelfth game of the season against 11 losses when he held the Bucs to six hits while the Cubs made eight off Hank Gornicki and Luke Hamlin. Gornicki held the Cubs hitless for three innings, then was taken out after the seventh when the Cubs had a total of four hits.

In the second game Bill Fleming, author of a one-hitter earlier in the season, turned in a two-hit performance and the only run scored against him was unearned in the first when Glen Russell erred twice.

Lou Novikoff returned to the Cub line-up and produced four hits in eight times at bat. Novikoff had been out for a week with a sore hand. In the second game Bill Nicholson hit his sixteenth home run of the season.

"If Washington were alive in these days—or if we were translated back into his—the problems, the discouragements, the high hopes, the lofty responsibilities to posterity would be much the same. We are now in danger of losing the battle for freedom which he lost so easily and so often and won again with such difficulty and such delay."

These are the words with which Rupert Hughes, noted novelist, opens his "Giants of Freedom" talk at 4:30 today over WJSV when he discusses America's figthing aims from the viewpoint of George Washington.

It is Hughes' contention that Washington had to fight more and harder battles against his own countrymen than he was permitted to fight against the foreign enemy. The novelist thinks the Father of Our Country would be doing the same thing now if he were alive, and he would be suffering the same defeats, dissensions and delays that now impede our war of defense and postpone the necessary offensive.

Hughes maintains that in our present "desperate plight," it is "well to remember how for our sakes Washington and his faithful few endured humiliation, catastrophe on catastrophe.

Hughes is the third prominent American to appear on "Giants of Freedom" with evaluation of our war aims from the viewpoints of great Americans of the past. C. B. S. presents this series in cooperation with Freedom House, Inc., and the United States Treasury Department.

LEGAL NOTICES 4

Woodward Building Washington D. C.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Kaly Elizabeth Phillips otherwise known as Kate Elizabeth Gossette, plaintiff, vs. Joseph H. Gossette, defendant. Civil Action File No. 15947. Order of publication—Absent defendant. The object of this suit is to obtain an annulment of plaintiff's marriage to the defendant on the ground that a former marriage contracted by the defendant had not been dissolved when he undertook to marry the plaintiff; or, alternatively, a judgment for an absolute divorce on the ground of defendant's desertion of the plaintiff. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 31st day of July, 1942, ordered that the defendant, Joseph H. Gossette, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the FORTIETH DAY, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. BOLITHA J. LAWS, Justice. A true copy. ## Bridge

During one of the early sessions of the national championships at New York, two women asked Sam Rossant to advise them on a hand.

Rossant, the rubber-bridge player who has rolled up a remarkable record in tournaments and who has some new ideas about the game, followed the women to their table, where the hand was laid out. "Can two clubs be made on this hand?" asked one of the women. "This is what we want to know."

Mr. Rossant studied the cards. "Yes, you can make two clubs," he answered. "At what bid did you play the hand?"

"Four spades," was the reply.

Some players, may feel a little critical about those of us who offer quiz questions: perhaps they would like to take us out for dinner some night and force us to eat cards and score sheets. It is therefore, with some apprehension that we offer today's problems.

Answers to Quiz

1. Although South holds better than three high-card tricks, he would be unwise to make a penalty double. Declarer's heart rebid shows a strong suit, possibly six cards long, and his partner has shown strength in both spades and diamonds. South's spade honors are probably under the ace, queen, and if North holds any heart honors they lie under declarer's bid suit. Although South may hold the ace, queen of clubs over declarer's king, it is unlikely that North will ever get in to lead through. The best call here is a pass.

2. South's best strategy is to jump to four hearts, as his partner may pass a three-heart call. North's heart overcall shows a good suit of at least five cards, making South's three hearts, including the jack, adequate trump support, and the fine club suit plus the singleton diamond make game look quite likely.

Navy Calls Agar For Active Duty

New York, Aug. 16 (INS).—Herbert Agar, editor-on-leave of the Louisville Courier-Journal and president of Freedom House, has been ordered to report for active duty in the United States Navy, it was announced tonight at the New York headquarters of Fredom House.

Agar, who holds a commission as lieutenant commander in the United States Naval Reserve, has been voted a leave of absence by Freedom House for the duration of the war. Commander Agar, a Pulitzer prize winner, was a leading spokesman for the interventionist cause prior to America's entry into the war.

Patriarch Hopes Peace Will End Assyrians' Wanderings

By Martha McLean
Post Staff Writer

After the tumult and the shouting of this war die, the Patriarch of the Church of the East, His Beatitude, Mar Eshai Shimun 23d hopes that there will be another League of Nations—one with real power—and he hopes that it will be centered in America.

"Not that you are any holier here," he explained with much good humor yesterday in his room at the Continental Hotel. "But you are farther away from it all and you are more self-sustaining."

Mar Eshai is the twenty-second in his family to head the Assyrian Church, one of the oldest Christian churches in existence, "an island of Christianity in a sea of Islam." Speaking the excellent English he learned in Britain as a boy, he said he planned about a week's stay here.

Beads of perspiration came out on his brow, partly from the sticky Washington morning, partly from his heavy black ecclesiastical robes and partly from his earnestness in putting his point across. "After this war the big, and the small, must both have a place to live," he said.

His people are now "the small." Numbering in all about 250,000 scattered in Russia, Syria, Iraq and this country, they have no land they may call their own.

They Have a Claim on Us

But Mar Eshai has hope for the times after this war. He hopes that the Allies will not forget the fight that 2000 of these people made a year ago last May, against a force of 35,000 Arabs backed by German Stukas.

Not just Bagdad was saved by that stand, but the way to Russia and the oil of the Caucasas. Three hundred of 2000 were lost, but the Middle East, the key to the Mediterranean, was saved, he recalled.

Aesopsian Parallel

"Like the lion and the mouse," His Beatitude said. "The Lion was powerless, but the Mouse was able to cut the cords." For this service Mar Eshai hopes his people will receive more after the war from the Allies than "Thank you very much. But we made no promises, you know."

That was the way he put it.

The story of the founding of the Assyrian Church begins during the life of Christ with King Abgar, a leper, who heard of the mistreatment Jesus was undergoing. The king invited Jesus to come to Mesopotamia and share his kingdom.

Jesus refused, saying he had a mission to perform, but promised he would send an Apostle to found the Assyrian Church. Then putting the imprint of His face upon a handkerchief, He sent the handkerchief to the king, who was cured. After Jesus' death, the Apostles Thomas and Thaddeus came to Babylon to establish the Assyrian Church.

Mar Eshai, a man in his middle thirties, is the 119th in the line of Babylonian patriarches. He assumed the patriarchiate, which passes from uncle to nephew because the patriarch never marries, in 1918, when his uncle was assassinated by his Kurdish (Mohammedan) host after a fine banquet.

The smallest Ally in the last World War, Mar Eshais' people lost almost 60 per cent of their number. Then only a youth, Nar Eshai led them through the midst of their enemies on a trek into the mountains of northwestern Persia. Cholera and typhoid decimated their numbers. "Like the Exodus in the Bible," Mar Eshai described it. "But our enemy had modern equipment."

In 1933 his people were the victims of another massacre. The patriarch spent the next four years putting his case before the League of Nations, which promised much but did little.

Now his people—what remains of them—are still at the service of the Allies. Two solutions of their plight are possible after the war, as the patriarch sees it. The most acceptable one would be to have their homeland back. By this Mar Echai means to be allowed to live as they did under the Turks before the last war, when they paid a nominal tribute, but were allowed to run their own affairs.

But if the post-1918 policies prevail, "sacrificing the minorities for the majorities," as his beatitude put it, that could not be. The best thing in that case, he believes, would be migration of his followers to some place in this hemisphere.

The patriarch has been in this country the past year, visiting leading churches and working toward founding a number of Assyrian churches across the continent. Plans are under way for a large church in Chicago, where some 10,000, or almost half of the Assyrians in this county live.

CIO Purchases Republicans' Headquarters

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

The C. I. O. has forced the Republican National Committee to move from its headquarters within a stone's throw of the White House.

What with Washington real estate prices booming, this may or may not have anything to do with the financial affairs of the two organizations.

The publicity division of the Republican National Committee let the cat out of the bay yesterday with a tersely worded, three-paragraph statement which said that their new headquarters are now on swanky Connecticut Avenue.

The commmittee's removal from 718 Jackson Place, in which the committee had rented space since 1936 (probably hopefully as it was an election year) was necessitated by the sale of the building and the desire of the purchaser to take over the entire building."

A call on the Republican National Committee's telephone number turned up only a "moving man." He didn't know for sure, but thought that the C. I. O. had purchased the building.

Another call to C. I. O. headquarters confirmed this

The new Connecticut Avenue headquarters of the Republicans is a building, "originally a residence and which has been occupied for the last ten years as headquarters by a business organization," according to the last paragraph of the publicity division's statement.
